to the most sternly critical intellect, should yet invest its features again with the sweet veil of their daily aspect - should make them again dawning with the splendour of wandering light - or involve them in the unsearchable depths of stormy obscurity: should restore to the divided anatomy its visible vitality of operation, clothe the naked crags with soft forests - enrich the mountain ruins with bright pastures, and lead the thoughts from the monotonous recurrence of the phenomena of the physical world, to the sweet interests & sorrows of human life & Death
