

Known Problems

Random “screen garbage” in the lower right corner of some clipping window types.

This is a “feature” of MacOS 8. Apparently, those at Apple never anticipated the use of alternate window styles in clipping files. As a result, the areas that would normally contain the scroll bars and grow box are not erased prior to opening the window. The garbage you see is the information that area of memory occupied prior to the window using it.

There is no planned fix for this problem at ClipDragon's end. Perhaps someone at Apple...