Introduction

Ouija boards are different things to different people. To some, they are simply games, fun to play with, but with no serious value; to others, they are a device for contacting spirits; to still others, they are an instrument of the devil. This board is no different. If you view it as a toy, then enjoy yourself. If you view it as evil, expect nothing good to come of it. And if you seriously attempt to contact spirits with it, then just maybe you will.

It may seem unlikely that anything from the spirit world can be contacted by a computer. The ouija board is a special tool, with magical powers, right? Well, maybe and maybe not. A ouija board will not work without hands touching the planchette, except in B horror movies, so it seems to me that maybe it's the people touching it that make the board work, that the spirit "speaks" through them, then they echo its words on the ouija board. If that is the case, there's no reason a spirit couldn't cause your hands to move a mouse rather than an actual planchette.

With all that in mind, why not give it a try? Get a friend, dim the lights, and ouija in the flickering light of the monitor.

Instructions

A ouija board is a device with which, it is said, spirits can be contacted. They "speak" by moving the planchette to letters which spell out their responses to questions.

To use a normal ouija board, two people put two fingers apiece on the planchette. In Ouija for Windows, you use the mouse instead. Outloud, ask the spirit a question (you can also type this in in the box marked ?). If you have contacted a spirit, it should slowly move the planchette/mouse towards some letter. When it seems to have settled on a choice, click on the left mouse button and it will record the letter for you in the * box. It should continue to move from letter to letter until it has spelled out something resembling a word. When it stops moving, try to figure out what it might have meant (see Interpretation). If you have some idea, type it in the ≥ box. To copy the literal answer into the * box, click on the *-> button. You can also type in the question at this time.

When the question has been answered, go to the NEXT button, and the question, answer, and interpretation will be recorded in the transcript.

If you accidentally bump the left button, you can erase the last letter from the * box by pressing the UNDO button. Also, to get around easier when not communicating with the spirit, you can drop the planchette.

Note that, unless you have had some experience with a ouija board, you will probably not succeed on your first few tries. Spirits can be nervous around unfamiliar faces.

Question suggestions

The possibilities for questions range from the simple "Anybody there" to "Who will I marry" to the movie favorite "When will I die?" "Anybody there," or something to that effect, is a good start. If the spirit moves to Yes, you can go on to ask it its name, where it used to live, or questions about your future. If it moves to No, you either have a spirit with a sense of humor or a friend who is pushing.

Basically, any question is fair game. Be careful, though, not to offend the spirit, or it may leave (see Goodbye). Good questions, at least questions the spirit is likely to answer, include questions about its past, about your future, about other people, and about life after death.

the ? box

The ? box, or Question box, is where you can type in your question for the spirit. This question will be recorded in the transcript . If you plan to ignore the transcript, you can leave this box blank and simply ask the question out loud.

The ? box can be activated by pressing CTRL-/ (which is CTRL-? without the shift).

the * box

The * box, or Answer box, is where the spirits answer appears, exactly as it said it. If you want to edit the answer, use the \cong box.

the > box

The > box, or Interpretation box, is where you can type what you think the spirit meant by its answer. To copy the * box into this box, use the *-> button, or press CTRL and - (the minus key) at the same time.

To activate this box, you can press CTRL and . (the period key) at the same time (CTRL-> without the shift).

Interpreting answers

The types of answers ouija boards tend to give are a bit cryptic. For instance, to say, "I went to France" the spirit may spell out "IWNT2FRNS." With experience, you should be able to pick out the words within an answer, but until then here are a few tips.

Leaving out vowels: Vowels will often be skipped over, except where their sound is important to the word. A good way to interpret such a word is trying to sound out the letters that are there.

Talking in rebus: Also, if a letter or number sounds like a whole word (such as C for "See" or 2 for "To") it may be substituted for it. An example: "2BRNo2B" for "To be or not to be." Again, sounding it out is a good way to figure out what it is supposed to mean.

Cut off answers: If, while a spirit is spelling out a word you say it, instead of finishing it it can just go to Yes. If that is the case, it simply means whatever you just said.

Typing in your interpretation

To type in your interpretation, click inside the ≥ box and simply type it in. If you want to use all or part of the literal answer (the * box), click on the *-> button. See also Dropping the Planchette .

Transcripts

Throughout your session, Ouija for Windows keeps a record of all the questions you have asked and the answers that have been given. These transcripts can be loaded and saved just like documents for other programs.

The three boxes at the bottom of the screen, labeled ?, *, and ≥, are all recorded in your transcript whenever you go to the NEXT button. Note that questions still on the bottom of the screen are not yet part of the transcript, and will not be saved. To make sure you have all the questions recorded, always make sure all three boxes are empty before saving your transcript.

Transcripts cannot be copied from or pasted to, but a text editor such as the Windows Notepad can be used to view and edit them. Make sure, however, to save transcripts edited outside of Ouija for Windows with a different name, or else Ouija will not be able to read them back in.

If you want to record a very long session, more than about 30 questions, you may want to break it up into several smaller sessions, because each transcript can only be 2500 characters long.

the *-> button

The *-> button is the copy button. It copies whatever is in the * box into the ≥ box, where it can be edited.

A shortcut for this key is CTRL and - (the minus key).

the NEXT button

The NEXT button moves on to the next question in the transcript . This involves two steps: Saving the last question, answer, and interpretation (? , * , and ≥ , respectively) and clearing out these same boxes for the next question.

Note that a question is not saved until you press the NEXT button.

A shortcut for this button is CTRL-N.

the UNDO button

The UNDO button is for when you accidentally bump the mouse button, and record a letter which was not meant to be an answer as part of one. It erases the last letter, number, or word (such as Yes or No) from the * box.

A shortcut for this key is CTRL-U.

Dropping the Planchette

If you press the right mouse button, the planchette will stop following the cursor around until you press it again. This is convenient for using the controls on the lower half of the screen and for menu selections.

Glossary

Planchette
Ouija Board

Planchette

The device that points out the letters on the Ouija board. In Ouija for Windows , it looks like the picture at the right.

Ouija Board (pronounced /WEE-jee board/) A board with all the letters and numbers, along with the words Yes, No, and Good-bye , printed on it. With it, it is said you can contact spirits. The spirits communicate by moving the Planchette on top of letters which spell out words.

If the Planchette moves to Good-Bye and stays, it means the spirit has left.
