

THE THIRD PARTY SOLUTION

Hewlett-Packard neither warrants nor recommends the use of any third party device or software with the HP LaserJet printers.

Connection Options (non-PostScript) Software Translators

Translators can vary in print quality and can change in support without HP's knowledge. If you use a software translator, the company that made the translator is responsible to provide support for the software translator. When shopping for a translator, make sure to compare out-put and quality. Translators can vary from near PostScript quality graphics and text to 72-dpi graphics and text depending on the implementation of QuickDraw to PCL routines. Some translators come with a cable to hook up the Macintosh to the HP LaserJet printer.
