DIRECT ACCESS

Distributed Access is not a canned solution. It's not a new piece of hardware or software or a sales force. It's an idea, literally based in decentralized network computing environments and figuratively based in distributing access to the people who need it. It's a new model of computing that offers the control of traditional legacy systems and the added flexibility and freedom to help you connect people to people and people to information.

How can we do that? By taking the time to understand not just your computing needs today, but the direction of your entire company. Knowing where you want to go and how you want to get there. But most of all, by knowing that what's truly important isn't computers or computing, it's information.
