

Coaching Staff

Oregon has produced 29 NFL Draft picks during Mike Bellotti's tenure as head coach.

When Mike Bellotti was elevated to head football coach at the University of Oregon on Feb. 13, 1995, few people could have envisioned the impact the former UC Davis honors student would have on a university, as well as a community, which was coming off its first conference championship in 37 years. Eight years later, all he would accomplish was the navigation of a program that would win more games than any other school in the Pacific-10 Conference, including the 2002 Fiesta Bowl, and finish that season second in the nation.

Few football coaches in the history of the University of Oregon have reached the peaks of athletic accomplishment that Bellotti has as the Ducks' head coach. And fewer have possessed the vision to lead the program to its apex at the beginning of the 21st century.

Since assuming the role as the school's offensive coordinator in 1989, he has constructed the foundation which has been responsible for creating some of the most explosive offensive arsenals in the country and unquestionably the most successful era in the program's 109 years.

None of his 29 predecessors can match the number of victories the popular Northern California native has accumulated in any consecutive nine-year span, with Bellotti possessing a 80-40 (66.6%) Oregon ledger and ranking third on the school's all-time coaching wins list. Only the legendary Hugo Bezdek (72.7%—1906, 1913-17) accumulated a better winning percentage among Oregon's all-time mentors who coached the Ducks a minimum of three seasons. Combining his 21-25-2 record from Chico State, Bellotti has an 101-65-2 overall record in 15 seasons.

While guiding the Ducks to an unprecedented seventh consecutive bowl appearance in 2003 and postseason berths in eight of his first ten campaigns, the Pac-10's dean of football head coaches has played a vital role in assembling more than 20 percent (119 wins) of the University's all-time triumphs (522) as an assistant coach and head man finished last season 16th on the conference's all-time winning percentage list (61.2%, 49-31) in league games among coaches with a minimum of five years Pac-10 head coaching experience. In addition, only eight active Division I coaches in the country have guided their current schools to more postseason appearances than Bellotti has at Oregon.

In 2001, Bellotti coached the Ducks to their first-ever 11-win season, as Oregon crushed Colorado 38-16 in the Fiesta Bowl to finish with an all-time high ranking of No. 2 in the Associated Press and USA Today/ESPN Coaches polls.

For his efforts, Bellotti was one of seven finalists for the Paul "Bear" Bryant College Football Coach of the Year Award.

Victories in the Fiesta Bowl, Holiday Bowl, Sun Bowl and Las Vegas Bowl have established him as the school's only mentor to coach the Ducks to four postseason wins. The Ducks' 10-2 mark in 2000 gave the University its first 10-win season in its history, and seventh- and ninth-place rankings in the year-end AP and USA Today/ESPN Coaches polls.

The former California State Chico head coach wasted little time leaving his mark on an Oregon program which snapped a 25-year postseason drought in his first season as an assistant in Eugene, with the Ducks surpassing all previous team scoring records in 1989. But not even his initial six-year association with the university, which resulted in the establishment or equivalency of no less than 40 team and individual single-game and season UO records, could prepare Oregon for what was to follow.

Assuming control over a program which had just won its first undisputed Pacific-10 Conference title in school history and received its first Rose Bowl invitation in four decades, it would have been easier to take a moment to reflect on past accomplishments while breaking in a pair of coordinators new to the program. What resulted was a second-consecutive New Year's Day appearance for the first time in school history as the Ducks equaled the previous season's effort with a nine-win season in 1995.

Simply put, no first-year coach in the history of Oregon football had ever won as many games (9-3). No other Oregon coach has equalled the number of single-season school-record victories (9) and then raised the bar to 10 and 11 wins. No other football coach has ever posted winning records in his first nine years of his Oregon tenure. It's obvious that Robert Michael Bellotti has Oregon football well in hand.

The Ducks have averaged better than 400 yards total offense in seven of the past ten seasons. In addition, Bellotti's teams completed his first six years ranked among the nation's top-25 in passing offense (15th in 1995; 12th in '96; 20th in '97; 11th in '98; 19th in '99; 25th in '00), finished seventh in the country in scoring offense (39.1 ppg) and 10th in total offense (478.2 avg.) in 1998, rated 11th in scoring offense (35.1 avg.) in '99, 19th in '01 (34.0) and 23rd in '02 (32.1), and ranked in the top 25 in the country in three major offensive categories four of the past nine years.

They have scored 30 or more points 92 times during Bellotti's Oregon tenure and his offenses have accumulated more than 73,000 yards (73, 635)—the most productive period of its length in school history. Bellotti's teams also have averaged 429.5 yards and 29.2 points during their last eight bowl appearances.

In addition, only seven quarterbacks have thrown for more than 8,000 yards and pitched for more than 60 touchdowns in Pacific-10 Conference history. Bellotti has coached two of them.

Bellotti's contingents also have gained the reputation for getting better as the season wears on, with the school accumulating a record of 22-10 in regular-season games after Oct. 31.

Yet throughout all the winning and record-setting, the one quality which remains constant for the 54-year-old offensive architect is poise. As a result of the infectious composure filtering down from the top, the Ducks have prevailed in 37 of the 49 games decided by a touchdown or less in Bellotti's first 120 Oregon head coaching assignments.

Bellotti has led Oregon to more wins over the past 10 seasons than any other school in the Pacific-10 Conference.

However, touchdowns remain the most important stat in Bellotti's book, with the Ducks eclipsing the school record for most touchdowns scored in a single season three of the past nine years.

His passions run much deeper than just the game of football. He sponsors an annual golf tournament, the Mike Bellotti Golf Classic—which raised a record $98,000 in 2003 in its ninth year. In addition, he donated $25,000 to the university's library system in 2002 to kick off the establishment of the Bellotti Family Fund.

He carries with him experience as a head coach in one of the nation's most difficult situations, a Division II football program that granted no scholarships. In five years at Chico State, the Wildcats finished second in the Northern California Conference four straight years, competing against the tradition-steeped national power UC Davis, a task made no easier by the fact that he played for the Aggies and is a graduate of the school.

The opportunity to be judged in the Pacific-10 Conference has showcased his coaching ability. In the Rose Bowl with more people watching the Ducks than at any time in the school's heritage, Oregon gained more yards than the highly publicized offense of Penn State that had emphatically led the nation in total offense in 1994 and boasted three first-round NFL draft selections.

Oregon, led by the game's co-MVP Danny O'Neil, set or tied 15 Rose Bowl records and the Ducks finished the day with 501 yards in total offense. Its sophisticated game plan kept the unbeaten Nittany Lions off balance all afternoon.

Born in Sacramento, Calif., he became the eighth head coach at Oregon since World War II almost six years to the day after assuming the role as the University's offensive coordinator in 1989. He was the fourth offensive coordinator under Rich Brooks and easily the most productive. The Ducks gained more than 4,000 yards in total offense three times in Bellotti's tenure as coordinator, averaging 4,044 yards per year and posting a 39-32-0 record during his six-year assistant coaching stint.

It's to the head coach's credit too, that the 1995 offense averaged more than 400 yards of offensive firepower for the first time since Bellotti's first season as coordinator in 1989. His influence proved to be even more successful in 1998 as the Ducks' 5,795 yards and 59 scores eclipsed the school's standards for total offense and touchdowns for the third time in as many years.

What They're Saying About Mike Bellotti and the Ducks

"There's no doubt the Ducks have become the Pac-10's foremost program."

— Tom Dienhart, The Sporting News

"Oregon coach Mike Bellotti is Joe Cool, as smooth in the heat of a football game as he is with fans and the news media. The Ducks might be trailing, or the game racing in overtime, and with his calm demeanor, Bellotti could be listening to music on those headsets, indulging his affinity for the golden age of rock 'n' roll and humming "Mack the Knife."

— Ron Bellamy, Eugene Register-Guard

"The Ducks have a history of plugging in another quarterback and watching the system work."

— Bob Clark, The Sporting News

"The offense is cool and the guys on defense aren't afraid to get their Nikes dirty."

— Lindy's

"Mike Bellotti is the best coach no one knows about."

— Dennis Dodd, CBS SportsLine.com

"Oregon coach Mike Bellotti is considered one of the best X-and-O men in the country."

— Bob Cunningham, thehuddle.com

"More than any other coach over the past decade, Bellotti has helped restore the way outsiders look out at the Pac-10 Conference."

— CollegeFootballNews.com

"Oregon is the program that changed the whole feel of the Pac-10 in the '90s. The Ducks blazed the way for the Washington States and Stanfords and everybody else, showing that not only the big three of USC, UCLA and Washington can become league champs and bowl game regulars...perhaps most significantly, they put the rest of the league on notice by ramping up its facilities (building the first indoor practice facility), forcing others to try to keep pace."

— Anthony Gimino, Lindy's

"Mike Bellotti is a lot like the rain in Eugene, Ore. — down to earth most of the time."

— Rob Oller, Columbus Dispatch

"Don't underestimate Bellotti's competitiveness or his passion. He has been known to cry after the Ducks have given great effort in a hard-fought victory."

— Ron Bellamy, Eugene Register-Guard

"If you look at all the offensive coordinators over the years that have come through Eugene, it all started with Mike Bellotti. He has an aggressive nature with the play calling, which I appreciate."

— Kirk Herbstreit, ESPN Analyst

During his Oregon tenure, Bellotti has been influential in the development of more Pacific-10 all-conference quarterbacks (four) than any other school—Bill Musgrave in 1990, O’Neil in 1994 (who completed his career as the Rose Bowl co-MVP), Akili Smith in 1998 (Oregon’s first Pac-10 offensive player of the year in league history) and Joey Harrington in 2001 (Pac-10 offensive player of the year, and a Heisman Trophy finalist). In addition, his system has been conducive to two quarterbacks each passing for over 1,000 yards in the same season on three separate occasions (1996, 1997 and 1999) — a feat that had never been accomplished in school history prior to Bellotti’s arrival.

While the faces have changed, Bellotti’s system has been responsible for Oregon ranking among the nation’s top-20 in passing offense six of the last 12 years under nine different quarterbacks as well as four different coordinators. Oregon led the Pacific-10 Conference in scoring his initial year as offensive coordinator in 1989 as well as atop the league in passing in his first year as head coach.

Following Oregon’s 1989 Independence Bowl trip, Bellotti coached the North offense in the Blue-Gray all-star classic in Montgomery, Ala., on Christmas Day. It was an honor that was duplicated in December 1996 when he was chosen to head the North’s defense. He was an assistant coach in the East-West Shine Game in January 1999 and head coach of the West squad for the 2002 game.

In 1993, Oregon’s quarterback established five one-season records for passing and total offense, with O’Neil’s 3,200 yards the first of its kind without the benefit of postseason. He finished his career with 8,311 yards, the sixth-highest total in Pac-10 history.

The 1994 season was not one of those 4,000-yard years, but it may have been Bellotti’s best coaching performance. The Ducks played without O’Neil, tailback Ricky Whittle, offensive tackle Steve Hardin and receiver Cristin McLemore, four of the squad's most outstanding players, during a portion of the season. After a 1-2 start and Oregon's season at a crossroads, the Ducks went to the ground game to beat Iowa with an ailing O'Neil, then rode the efforts of backup Tony Graziani to an exhilarating victory at USC.

When Oregon marched 98 yards to take the lead against Washington, Oregon's offense was gaining confidence as performances against Stanford and Penn State with a healthy arsenal would indicate.

Bellotti posted a 21-25-2 record in five seasons at Chico State and a 15-9-2 mark in the Northern California Athletic Since 1916, only USC's John Robinson (1976-82, '93) and Howard Jones (1925-32) have accumulated more overall wins (75 and 72) than Mike Bellotti in their first eight seasons atop their respective programs in Pac-10 history.

Conference. He was selected as the league's coach of the year in 1986 when the Wildcats ranked nationally in total offense and finished 7-3-0 with a No. 10 national rating.

A native of Concord, Calif., Bellotti was a 1973 graduate of UC Davis as an honors student majoring in physical education with a combined minor in math and chemistry. He was a second-team all-Far West Conference tight end as a junior and at wide receiver as a senior. He also began his coaching career at Davis as head coach of the JV and receivers coach in addition to coaching the JV baseball squad.

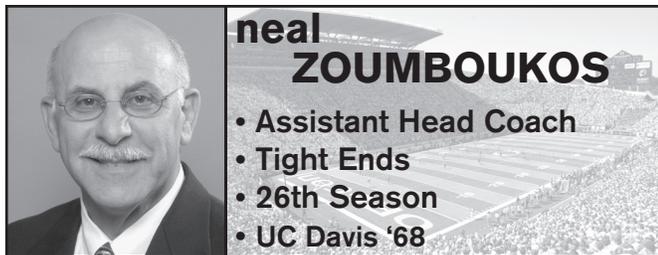

After four years, he moved to Cal State-Hayward as offensive coordinator for two seasons before a one-year stint in the same capacity at Weber State. He returned to Hayward the next year and obtained his master's degree in physical education during a four-year stay before being selected head coach at Chico State in 1984.

Bellotti (12-21-50) has three children; Luke (3-16-85), Keri (10-29-86) and Sean (3-31-94). His oldest son, Luke is a walk-on junior kicker for the Ducks this season.

Neal
ZOUMBOUKOS

- Assistant Head Coach
- Tight Ends
- 26th Season
- UC Davis '68

In his 26th season with the Ducks as the dean of Pacific-10 Conference assistants, Neal Zoumboukos has spent all but one of those campaigns coaching Oregon's interior offensive line, but will take over as the tight end's coach this season.

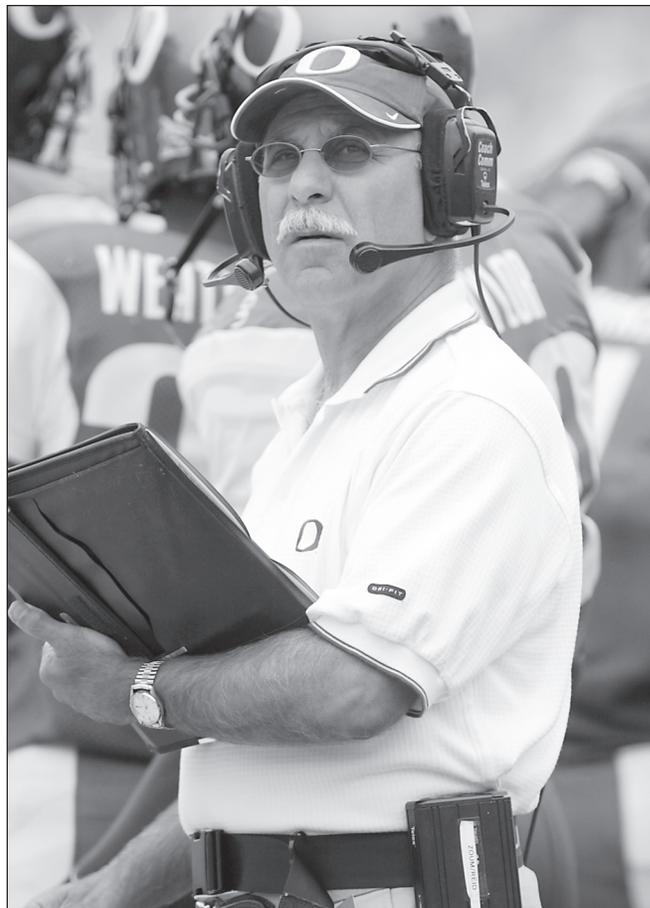

Now in his 38th year overall in the collegiate coaching ranks, Zoumboukos has encountered a great deal of success as an on-the-field technician as well as a recruiter. Under his watchful eye in 2000 and 2001, his unit paved the way for Oregon's eighth and ninth 1,000-yard rushers in Maurice Morris and Onterrio Smith. In 2002, the line helped Smith join Morris as the only Ducks to rush for 1,000 yards in back-to-back seasons. In 2003, the Duck line helped anchor an offense that ranked second in the conference in red zone scoring (85.7 percent). Last season, the Duck o-line — led by first-team All-Pac-10 honoree Adam Snyder — helped current Duck running back Terrence Whitehead rush for 1,144 yards, good for second in the Pac-10. As a team, Oregon has rushed for over 140 yards per game eight of the last nine seasons. The Oregon offensive line has also led the Pac-10 in fewest sacks allowed three of the past six years.

In 2001, his pupils were responsible for aiding the program's best running attack since 1980, with the Ducks' 196.5 yards per game ranking 25th in the country. In 2002, the Ducks again ranked second in the conference in rushing (147.3 avg.) and featured yet another Pac-10 first-team selection in Smith, while center Dan Weaver was awarded second-team honors.

The 59-year-old Zoumboukos has instilled a work ethic that has benefitted his pupils long after their football careers have ended. He possesses a passion that has prompted many of his former players to follow in their mentor's footsteps into the coaching profession.

Zoumboukos was charged with additional duties as administrative assistant in 1983. He was further elevated to assistant head coach during the spring of 1990, and also assumed many department administrative tasks during former head coach Rich Brooks' two-year stint as athletics director (1992-94).

A graduate of UC Davis, Zoumboukos coached in two different stretches at his alma mater for eight seasons. Following a three-year stint at San Francisco, he returned to Davis where the Mustangs won seven straight Far West Conference championships and were ranked No. 1 in Division II in 1977.

Born: May 13, 1946, in San Francisco, Calif.

Personal: Wife, Yvonne, and three sons: Derek (8-9-64), Lance (3-21-70) and Peter (5-25-84)

Education: M.A. in Physical Education, San Francisco State, 1972; B.A. in History, UC Davis, 1968; St. Ignatius (San Francisco, Calif.) High School, 1964

Now in his third stint with the Ducks (second as defensive coordinator), Nick Aliotti continues to mentor the Oregon defense with a familiarly aggressive, and always innovative flair.

Credited with orchestrating the "Gang Green" defense that helped propel Oregon to thse Rose Bowl following the 1994 season, Aliotti is one of the school's most popular assistants in recent memory. Returning to the position prior to the 1999 season where he enjoyed his greatest success, the energetic Aliotti is in his 15th overall campaign with the Ducks in addition to his one season heading the defense at UCLA and three years in the NFL.

Employing a philosophy of focusing on opponents' running game, in 2003 he helped Oregon rank 16th nationally against the run (107.1 avg.). In 2004, the Ducks remained strong against the run, ranking 27th nationally (122.9 avg.). During the Ducks' Fiesta Bowl season of 2001, Oregon limited teams to 115.3 avg. against the run, its best since its 1994 Rose Bowl year, while ranking second in the league. For his efforts that season, Aliotti was rewarded by being an AFLAC National Assistant Coach-of-the-Year recipient. In his first season in his current stint in Eugene in 2000, the Ducks led the Pac-10 in passing defense and stood second in scoring defense.

Under his guidance, Oregon's defense has held five of its opponents at 100 yards or less per game rushing each of the last five years. However, few performances may have been more impressive than limiting No. 3 Michigan to a paltry -3 rushing yards in last season's 31-27 upset of the Wolverines. Another equally impressive performance included limiting the ground attack of Colorado to just 49 yards in the 2002 Fiesta Bowl triumph. In 2004, the Ducks' defense stood tall against Stanford, holding the Cardinal to -8 yards rushing in a 16-13 Oregon victory in Palo Alto, Calif.

The 51-year-old's other career highlights include taking a unit ranked eighth in the Pac-10 in defense in the first year of his previous Oregon tenure in 1993 and molding it into one that ranked among the nation's top-20 defending the run (12th, 112.4 ypg avg.), pass (14th) and in scoring defense (20th, 17.7 avg.). He also helped design defenses which finished among the top 20 nationally in one of four major defensive categories on 10 occasions.

During his 15 years on the Oregon staff, Aliotti has coached 21 defensive players selected in the NFL draft, including 2004 draftees, second round defensive tackles Igor Olshansky and Junior Siavii and sixth-round pick, free safety Keith Lewis.

After his departure following the school's first outright Pac-10 title ever and its first Rose Bowl appearance in 37 years, the Northern California native served as a defensive assistant and special teams coach with the St. Louis Rams from 1995-97 before returning to the collegiate ranks in 1998.

As a player, Aliotti was a three-year letterman as a running back at UC Davis, earning freshman team MVP honors in 1972 and Far Western Conference accolades his senior season.

This marks his fourth tour of duty alongside Mike Bellotti, with the duo first coaching together at their alma mater in 1976, followed by four years at Chico State and the previous Oregon tenure (1989-94).

CROWTON

- Offensive Coordinator
- Quarterbacks
- First Season
- Brigham Young '83

Entering his first season as the Ducks' offensive coordinator and quarterbacks coach, offensive wizard Gary Crowton comes to Eugene having engineered offenses that have ranked among the best in the country during his 17 years as an offensive coordinator or head coach at the collegiate and NFL levels.

The 47-year-old Orem, Utah, native comes to Oregon after accumulating a 47-36 record in four seasons as head coach at BYU (2001-04) and Louisiana Tech (1996-98), as well as two years as offensive coordinator with the Chicago Bears (1999-2000) in the National Football League.

In his first year guiding the Cougars, Crowton devised an offense which led the nation in total offense (542.9 avg.) and scoring (46.8 avg.), while BYU finished 2001 with a 12-2 record and a Mountain West Conference championship. For his efforts, he was named conference and district coach of the year. During his head-coaching tenure in Provo, the Cougars averaged better than 409 yards of total offense while tallying a 26-23 ledger.

In 1999 with the Chicago Bears, his offense ranked third in the NFL in passing (258.5 avg.) while establishing a franchise record with 4,136 yards through the air, as well as eighth in the league in total offense (345.2 avg.).

In three seasons as head coach at Louisiana Tech, Crowton built an offenses that tallied 12,745 yards (374.9 per game avg.) and 115 touchdowns passing. In his final season, the Bulldogs passed for a school-record 4,943 yards while leading the country in passing (432.1 avg.) and finishing second in total offense (542.0 avg.). Louisiana Tech also scored 50 or more points in eight of 12 games in 1998 while eclipsing 300 yards passing on 10 occasions.

In 1997, Louisiana Tech ranked third in the country in both passing (360.5 avg.) and total offense (496.0 avg.).

He accumulated a record of 21-13 at the Ruston, La., school, including a 9-2 slate in 1997.

assistant at BYU under LaVell Edwards in 1982, where he earned his bachelor's degree in physical education in 1983. He proceeded to serve as secondary coach at Snow (Utah) Junior College in 1983 before becoming offensive coordinator at the school for the next three seasons. During his stint, he helped lead Snow to the National Junior College Athletic Association national championship in 1985.

He then served as passing game coordinator at Western Illinois for one year (1987), followed by offensive coordinator at New Hampshire (1988-90), quarterbacks coach at Boston College (1991-93), co-offensive coordinator at Georgia Tech (1994), and offensive coordinator at Louisiana Tech (1995) before being elevated to head coach the following year.

Among the standouts he has tutored are Luke Staley, who was the recipient of the Doak Walker Award as the nation's top running back and led the nation in scoring at BYU in 2001; Troy Edwards, Louisiana Tech's 1998 Biletnikoff Award honoree as the top collegiate receiver in the country; Louisiana Tech quarterback Tim Rattay, who finished 10th in balloting for the Heisman Trophy in 1999; and Glenn Foley, who finished fifth in the Heisman Trophy voting in 1993.

The former all-league quarterback at Orem High School earned All-America acclaim at Snow Junior College before completing his football career as a quarterback, wide receiver and defensive back at Colorado State in 1978. He then ran track for one year at Idaho State before earning his degree at BYU.

If his players are a reflection on a coach, then Gary Campbell has logged an outstanding 22-year career working with Oregon's offensive backs. In the pass-happy Pacific-10 Conference, he has helped Oregon keep the alternative prominent in the Ducks' attack.

In 2004, the Oregon running attack returned to form, as current Duck Terrence Whitehead rushed for 1,144 yards, good for second in the Pac-10. Whitehead marked the tenth runner under Campbell who has for over 1,000 yards.

In 2003, despite not producing a 1,000-yard rusher, the Ducks still managed to finish fourth in the Pac-10 in rush offense. Since 1997, Oregon running backs have produced 46 100-yard rushing performances.

His tutelage helped Onterio Smith (2001, '02), Maurice Morris (2000, '01) and Reuben Droughns (1999) become the seventh, eighth and ninth 1,000-yard rushers in Oregon history. Droughns and Smith were honored as his fourth and fifth, first-team all-conference pupils in 1995 and 2002. Morris, a second-round NFL pick in 2002, became the first back-to-back 1,000-yard rusher in school history, and Smith, another NFL Draft choice, followed suit in 2001 and '02.

The Ennis, Texas, native's efforts have been extremely visible in the school's record books. Ten of the Ducks' top-11 single-season rushing totals have been recorded by Campbell proteges. Campbell's backs own Oregon's top three career rushing totals and seven of its top nine. In addition, Smith set the school single-game rushing record under Campbell's watch, gaining 285 yards at Washington State in 2002.

A proponent of the importance of developing running backs' all-around game, he successfully tutored the school's first conference rushing champion in 26 years and single-season rushing leader Saladin McCullough. One of the Ducks' best tailbacks ever also established a school record by rushing for 15 TDs in only seven games in 1996 and equaled a Pac-10 record with five touchdowns in one outing.

In 1995, Campbell brought the potentially outstanding career of senior tailback Ricky Whittle to fruition. Whittle crushed Oregon's one-season all-purpose yardage record prior to McCullough bettering it, and became the program's first running back ever to haul in 50 passes.

In 1998, he honed the talents of Droughns into becoming the first player in school history to rush for better than 200 yards in more than one game in the same season before injuries halted his ascension as one of the nation's best.

A former starting fullback at UCLA, the 52-year-old Campbell came to Oregon in 1983 after one season at Pacific.

In addition to his playing days at UCLA in the early 1970s, where he scored two touchdowns in one of Oregon's biggest victories ever (1970, 41-40), he was a graduate assistant for the Bruins in 1976-78.

Since coming to Oregon, Campbell has furthered the careers of countless talents, including former 11-year NFL veteran Derek Loville. Tony Cherry and Loville were both Pacific-10 Conference rushing runners-up during their collegiate career, while McCullough and Droughns averaged better than 100 yards per game for their careers.

FERRIGNO

- Wide Receivers
- Fifth Season
- San Francisco State '75

Dan Ferrigno (pronounced Fuh-REEN-yo), who has 20 years of experience as an assistant coach in the Pacific-10 Conference and 13 within the state of Oregon, has coached the Ducks' wide receivers for the past four seasons.

Last season, the Ducks maintained a balanced attack from the wideout position. Four Duck wide receivers caught 10 or more passes, including Demetrius Williams, who ranked among the top-10 in the Pac-10 for yards per game (8th, 59.3) and receptions per game (6th, 4.70).

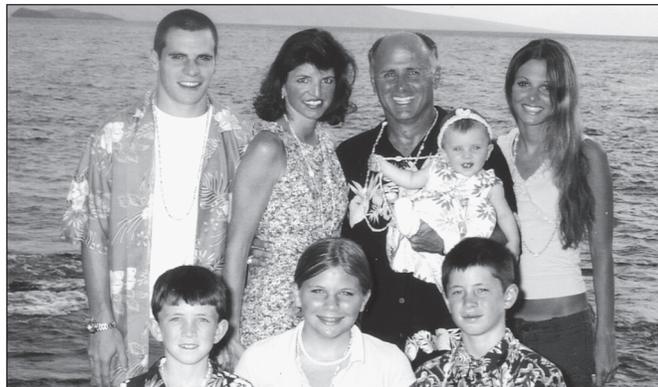

In 2003, the Oregon wide receiver corps posted two players (Samie Parker and Demetrius Williams) among the top ten in total receiving yards in the Pac-10. Since Ferrigno's start in 2001, the Ducks have had 19 100-yard receiving performances.

In his first season with the Ducks, Oregon produced its first all-conference receiver (Keenan Howry) since Lew Barnes in 1985. In 2002, Howry raised his national-leading consecutive catch record to 48 games, and also became the Ducks' all-time receiving leader in receptions (173) and touchdowns (24), and ranks second in yardage (2,698). Under the guidance of Ferrigno, senior Samie Parker surpassed Howry in career receptions (178) and yardage (2,761) in 2003.

Prior to joining the Ducks, the 52-year-old San Francisco native tutored USC wide receivers and special teams in 2000. Altogether, he has spent all but five of his 29-year coaching career concentrating on the offensive side since earning All-America honors as a wide receiver at San Francisco State.

He aided in the development of USC's Kareem Kelly, who finished third in the Pac-10 in receptions (55 catches for 796 yards) in 2000, as the Trojans ranked third in the league in passing offense (262.3 avg.) while leading the conference in total offense (415.9 avg.). Prior to his stint on the Trojans' staff, Ferrigno spent the previous four years coaching wide receivers and tight ends at California after serving as an assistant coach at Oregon State from 1987 through 1995.

Among his other standouts, NFL All-Pro and former California tight end Tony Gonzalez was a first-team selection, as well as teammates and all-conference special teams stalwarts Nick Harris and Delta O'Neal. NFL defensive back Reggie Tongue, a pupil at Oregon State, was a league honoree in 1995.

After breaking into the coaching profession as an assistant coach at San Francisco's St. Ignatius High School in 1975, he initiated his college coaching career as wide receivers and tight ends coach at San Francisco State in 1978, where he was later inducted into his alma mater's athletic hall of fame in 1992. Following a one-year stint at Pacific and two years as a graduate assistant at California (1980-81), Ferrigno began a five-year stay at Western Michigan in 1982, serving as offensive coordinator his final two seasons.

He began a four-year term coaching the running backs and special teams at Oregon State in 1987 before shifting to the defense to mentor its secondary in 1991 and '95. He coached the Beavers' outside linebackers from 1992-94. Ferrigno migrated south to instruct the tight ends and special teams at California in 1996 before shifting his emphasis to wide receivers in 1999.

The former Riordan High School prep received his undergraduate degree in physical education in 1975 from San Francisco State, where he still holds the school's career records for receptions, receiving yards and touchdowns. Following his collegiate career, he signed as a free agent with the Denver Broncos before returning to his alma mater to earn his teaching credentials in 1978.

Ferrigno is also an avid runner who has a personal best 3:18 time in a marathon.

A two-year starting defensive lineman at the University of Oregon before embarking on a 12-year coaching career in the professional and collegiate ranks, Michael Gray begins his first season as the Ducks' defensive line coach. This season, Gray inherits a defensive line that returns All-Pac-10 honorees Haloti Ngata (3.5 sacks, 8.5 TFLs) and Devan Long (7.5 sacks, 15 TFLs).

Gray comes to Oregon following two years as defensive line coach on Rich Brooks' staff at the University of Kentucky. The 45-year-old has encountered tremendous success in nine years of coaching at the Division I level, including six seasons of experience in the Pacific-10 Conference. Over the last seven campaigns, the Baltimore, Md., native has been responsible for the development of five first-team all-conference standouts in addition to assisting with the structuring of units which twice ranked among the top 15 in the country in rushing defense since 2000.

He enjoyed a bulk of his notoriety in six seasons as defensive line coach at Oregon State (1997-2002) when the school went to three bowl games in his final four seasons there. In 2000, Oregon State led the Pac-10 in total defense (314.4 avg.) and scoring defense (18.5 avg.), while ranking second against the run (93.1 avg.). On a national scale, the defense finished 20th, 19th and 13th, respectively, with the Beavers capping their 11-1 record with a 41-9 Fiesta Bowl rout over Notre Dame.

In 2002, he assisted units that ranked second in the league in total defense (11th nationally) and scoring defense (t27th), as well as third in rushing defense (9th).

At Kentucky, Gray played a role in the overall improvement of the defense in 2003 over the previous year, with Sweet Pea Burns earning first-team all-Southeastern Conference accolades while leading the league in tackles for loss, and Lamar Mills' selection as a first-team Freshman

All-American. In 2004, Ricky Abren was named a second-team Freshman All-American.

Gray broke into the coaching ranks as an assistant for two years with British Columbia of the Canadian Football League (1993-94), where he was associated with winning a Grey Cup championship in 1994, before migrating to Weber State (1995) and the St. Louis Rams (1996) of the National Football League.

Gray first joined the Ducks in 1981 as a junior college All-American from West Hills (Calif.) College before graduating from Oregon with a bachelor's degree in Recreation and Park Management in 1984. Following his first season, he was the recipient of the Len Casanova Award as the program's top newcomer. He completed his Oregon career (1981-82) recording 78 tackles and recovering two fumbles.

He continued his playing career as a two-time all-conference pick during eight years in the CFL with British Columbia (1985-86) and Winnipeg (1987-92). Along the way, Gray played for teams that won three Grey Cup Championships (British Columbia in 1985; Winnipeg in 1988, 1990) in addition to being named the league's Most Outstanding Rookie in 1985 and Grey Cup Defensive Player of the Game in '88.

Gray becomes the third former Oregon player on Bellotti's staff, joining Steve Greatwood ('80) and linebackers coach Don Pellum ('85).

He and his wife, Susan, have one son, Parker (12-27-92).

Steve Greatwood begins his 22nd season as a Duck coach, and will assume the offensive line coaching duties this year after spending the past four seasons with the defensive line. The move to sets up to be an easy transition for Greatwood, after spending 1983-92 in charge of the Duck offensive line.

Last season, the Duck defensive line held their opponents to 122.1 yards per game on the ground, marking the fifth consecutive season under Greatwood the UO defensive line has helped hold its opponents under 125 yards per game rushing.

In 2003, the Duck defensive line helped post a 16th national ranking against the run (107.1 ypg.), highlighted by three all-league defensive linemen (Junior Siavii, Igor Olshansky and Devan Long). Both Olshansky and Siavii were drafted in the second round of the 2004 NFL draft.

Oregon's rushing defense ranked first in the conference in 2000 (118.2 avg.) and second in 2001 (115.3 avg.), while the 2002 unit allowed 118.2 yards per game to rank 25th nationally, thanks to All-Pac-10 picks Haloti Ngata and Olshansky.

Greatwood's defensive lines have held opponents below 100 yards rushing 26 times in the last five seasons. Among those games are -8 net yards by Stanford in 2004, -3 net yards by No. 3 Michigan in 2003, -9 net yards by UCLA in 2000, 45 yards by a Colorado team in the 2002 Fiesta Bowl that came into the game ranked eighth in the country (228.5 avg.), and 31 yards by both Arizona State and Mississippi State in 2002.

The 46-year-old Eugene native was an integral part of his alma mater's coaching staff for 15 seasons that concluded with a berth in the 1995 Rose Bowl. That included the last six years of his previous tenure as offensive line coach working with offensive coordinator Mike Bellotti.

Emmy, Sheri, Kallie, Steve and Tessa Greatwood

Following the 1994 season and Oregon's Pacific-10 Conference championship, Greatwood departed with former Ducks' head coach Rich Brooks to coach the offensive line and tight ends with the St. Louis Rams.

He rejoined the collegiate ranks in 1997 at Maryland before returning to the West Coast the following year and heading the offensive line at USC. During his stay with the Trojans, Oregon's former three-year starting offensive guard aided in the development of two-time all-conference lineman and All-American Travis Claridge — a second-round NFL draft pick.

Greatwood spent all but one of his previous 14 years as a full-time Oregon assistant also tutoring the tight ends in addition to various duties along the offensive line. Included among his more decorated pupils were team MVP and all-conference tight end Doug Herman (1984), the Ducks' receiving leader Bobby DeBisschop (1986), as well as tight ends Jeff Thomason and Willy Tate, both who encountered stints in the NFL.

Under his guidance, Oregon enjoyed its greatest success running the football within an 18-year span, with the 160.7-yard average and 20 TDs in 1988 representing an eight-year pinnacle. The Ducks ascended to third in the Pac-10 in rushing in 1989 (14th in the country in scoring), with the program surpassing no fewer than 21 team and individual records. He also assisted in molding the front line which aided the school's career rushing leader.

The former Churchill High School standout completed his playing career with an appearance in the Hula Bowl in 1980 and was the recipient of the Bob Officer Award, given to the Oregon player who makes a major contribution to the success of the program despite physical adversity.

Greatwood later signed as a free agent with the San Francisco 49ers before initiating his coaching career as the Ducks' defensive graduate assistant for two years.

John Neal, who has accumulated 21 years of experience tutoring defensive secondaries in the Pacific-10, Southeastern, Western Athletic and Conference USA, enters his third season with Oregon.

In Neal's first two seasons as secondary coach, the Duck pass defense improved from a 291.2 avg. in 2002 to 216.8 avg. in 2004. Another vast improvement was the teams pass efficiency defense, ranking 46th (120.7, 2003) and 57th (121.8, 2004) nationally, up from 102nd (140.8) in 2002.

Prior to Oregon, the 48-year-old native of Mountain View, Calif., spent the eight seasons coaching the defensive backs at Alabama-Birmingham. He served as defensive coordinator his last two seasons at UAB, where the Blazers ranked fifth in the country in total defense in 2001 (265.9 avg.). UAB was also among the national defensive leaders in 2000, ranking ninth in the country in scoring defense and 11th in total defense.

In 1999, the Blazers were third nationally in interceptions (19), while the 1997 squad was ninth nationally in pass efficiency defense. Three UAB defensive backs from those teams are currently playing in the NFL: second-team All-American Rodregis Brooks (Indianapolis), Izell Reese (Denver) and Dainon Sidney (Tennessee).

Helping UAB upgrade from the NCAA Division I-AA level to full I-A status in Conference USA, Neal assisted in building the Blazers' program in many ways aside from his work with the secondary. He volunteered to be the team's recruiting coordinator, a position he held for six years. He also assumed duties with UAB's special teams, instructing punters, the punt return team and kick return team at some point during his eight-year tenure. The Blazers blocked nine punts, returning five for touchdowns during a two-year span from 1999-2000.

Prior to arriving at UAB in 1995, Neal served as secondary coach at Mississippi from 1992-94. His 1993 squad led the nation in total defense (234.5 avg.) and ranked third against the pass while allowing the fewest touchdown passes in the country (5). The Rebels finished sixth nationally in pass defense while leading the SEC in 1994.

Neal sandwiched a pair of stints as defensive coordinator at Pacific (1990-91) and East Tennessee State (1986) around a three-year tenure as defensive backs coach at Oregon State (1987-89). The Beavers ranked second in the Pac-10 in pass defense in 1987 (183.3 avg.).

The 1980 graduate of Brigham Young was a two-year letterman for the Cougars in 1978-79, earning all-WAC honors at defensive back as a senior. He transferred to BYU after playing two seasons at Foothill Junior College (Los Altos Hills, Calif.).

He broke into the coaching profession as a graduate assistant at his alma mater in the spring of 1980 before moving to New Mexico to coach the Lobos' junior varsity team that fall. Neal was elevated to full-time assistant coach at New Mexico in 1981, where he coached linebackers and defensive backs through the 1985 campaign. The Lobos led the WAC in defense in 1982 and 1983 and finished the 1982 campaign with a 10-1 record.

One of the University of Oregon's best linebackers during the 1980s has translated his talents on the field and recruiting trails for his 13th straight and 17th overall season as one of the Ducks' most versatile assistant coaches. For seven of the last eight years, Pellum has concentrated on his specialty, linebackers.

He often has found himself instructing one of the Ducks' most inexperienced positions and has always thrived. His players have led Oregon's defense in quarterback sacks seven of the last 12 years, including 26 of the Ducks' 38 sacks in 1999 by the defensive front four. Duck fans also fondly remember an inexperienced group prior to the 1994 campaign that keyed back-to-back New Year's Day bowl appearances following the 1994 and '95 campaigns.

One of Oregon's most popular former players, Pellum returned to coaching in 1993 following six years as a recruiting coordinator at Oregon and the University of California. Since finishing at Oregon in 1984 as a starter, Pellum has gained valuable experience in many levels of athletic administration, but relished the invitation to renew association with players on the field.

He is credited with much of the development of 1999 all-conference honorees Terry Miller, Dietrich Moore, two-time all-league lineman Saul Patu, 2002 NFL draft choice Wesly Mallard and 2003 second-team all-league Kevin Mitchell.

Pellum was responsible with assembling outstanding recruiting classes while at Oregon and California, and has been responsible for directing some of the Ducks' best recruiting efforts in school history since his return. His recruiting efforts landed him on the Rivals.com Top 25 Recruiter list in 2004 after the Ducks were named the No. 12 recruiting class in the country.

The 42-year-old Banning, Calif., native was a graduate assistant at Oregon for two years while completing an advanced degree in telecommunications and film, coaching the tight ends, and assembling the scout teams. He also has completed some work toward his Ph.D.

He spent the 1987 season at Willamette University as a defensive assistant and strength coach before returning to Oregon that December in his recruiting assignment.

Jim Radcliffe, Oregon's head strength and conditioning coach for the last 18 seasons, plays a significant role in the Ducks' football program as the designer of the year-round development calendar.

Radcliffe, who guided the receivers during much of the 1999 fall camp, furnishes the student-athletes with a wide variety of exercise through weight training and lifting systems, and is a noted authority in the field of exercises dealing with the improvement of speed and quickness.

The 47-year-old native of McCloud, Calif., became assistant strength coach at Oregon in 1985, a position he held for two years before assuming the duties of head coach in that area.

Radcliffe taught and coached a variety of sports and was the athletic trainer for four years at Aloha High School from 1980-83.

He then did graduate study at Colorado and worked in private business prior to joining the Ducks' staff. Graduating from Pacific (Ore.) in Forest Grove, he played four seasons at defensive back and was captain of the special teams. Radcliffe earned his Master's in biomechanis from Oregon in 1992.

Radcliffe is active in national organizations surrounding his profession and is certified by the United States Weightlifting Federation. He also has written books, been published in numerous professional journals and produced videos on plyometrics, one of the most effective exercise techniques.

Education: M.S. in Biomechanics, Oregon, 1992. B.S. in Physical Education and Health, Pacific (Ore.), 1980; McCloud High School, 1976

Coaching Career - 25th Year: Head Strength and Conditioning, Oregon (1987-present); Assistant Strength and Conditioning, Oregon (1985-86); Coach/Athletic Trainer, Aloha High School (1980-83)

Jeff Hawkins is in his fifth season as Oregon's director of football operations. Hawkins, 51, served in a similar position under Mike Bellotti at Chico State from 1985-87. He also had stints as an assistant coach and recruiting coordinator at Dartmouth (1987-91) and Tulane (1992-95).

Originally from Kingston, Mass., Hawkins spent three years in the Army following his 1972 graduation from Silver Lake High School where his teammates included current college head coaches Buddy Teevens (Stanford) and Tim Murphy (Harvard). After completing his tour and receiving an honorable discharge, Hawkins attended Bridgewater State, where he started all four years on the defensive line and was named co-captain his senior year.

After earning his bachelor's degree in physical education from Bridgewater State, he spent the five years in the front office of the NFL's New England Patriots before joining Bellotti at Chico State.

Prior to coming to Oregon, he lived in New Orleans for 10 years where he worked at Tulane and later served as director of special projects for the Sugar Bowl (1996-01) and vice president of the Special Olympics Louisiana for four years. He regularly worked game-day assignments with Tulane and the New Orleans Saints.

Jeff and his wife Amy live in Eugene and had their first child, daughter Gabrielle, in August 2003.

A member of Oregon's 1994 Rose Bowl team, Reggie Jordan enters his first season as the program's assistant director of football operations after spending the past five years as Oregon's coordinator of academics.

Prior to his previous position overseeing academics, Jordan was an academic advisor on campus.

In this current position, Jordan assumes the responsibilities of assisting in all aspects of the administration of the football program, including camps/clinics, external public relations, education and development, bowl game planning, recruiting, gameday management and serving as a mentor to student-athletes and prospective student-athletes.

After graduating from California's Fairfield High School in 1992, Jordan came to the University of Oregon as a part of the Ducks' Rose Bowl team as a sophomore and accounted for seven tackles in the game. Also had a 38-yard interception return in the game that set up the game-tying score by the Ducks. As a senior Jordan finished fourth on the team with 52 tackles and paced the Ducks with 20 tackles for loss.

Jordan, 31, received a B.A. in English from the University of Oregon in 1996. He and his wife, Shelly, have one daughter, Emma Rose (5-17-05) and one niece, Shimea Jordan (5-6-90).

MOORE

- Graduate Assistant
- Third Season
- Oregon '00

A standout linebacker for Oregon's 1999 Sun Bowl and 1998 Aloha Bowl teams, Dietrich Moore enters his third season as a graduate assistant.

After graduating from the University in 2000, Moore spent one season as linebackers coach at Marist (Eugene, Ore.) High School under former Duck Mike Allison, where he also assisted with special teams, and then became defensive coordinator at South Eugene High School under former Duck quarterback Chris Miller.

Moore was Oregon's fifth-leading tackler as a senior in 1999 with 65 and was third on the team in both tackles-for-loss (11) and sacks (5.5). He started the last 31 games of his career.

The Anchorage, Alaska, native had a career-best 81 tackles as a junior and nine TFLs when he earned all-Pac-10 honorable mention honors. For his career, he recorded 217 total tackles, 24 TFLs, 8.5 sacks and 11 passes broken up.

The 26-year-old Moore rushed for more than 1,100 yards his last two years at A.J. Dimond High School despite an ankle injury.

BUTKUS

- Graduate Assistant
- First Season
- Illinois '01

Former University of Illinois offensive lineman Luke Butkus enters his first season as a graduate assistant football coach at the University of Oregon.

The 25-year-old Illinois native, who is the nephew of NFL Hall-of-Fame linebacker Dick Butkus, joins the Ducks' offensive staff as a replacement for Aleki Pascua, who concluded his three-year graduate assistant appointment at the end of the 2004 season.

Butkus was a three-year starting center and two-time all-Big Ten Conference honoree at Illinois before earning his undergraduate degree in speech communications in 2001.

GINTHER

- Assistant Strength Coach
- 18th Season
- Miami (Ohio) '84

Geoff Ginther continues his association with the University in his 18th year with the Ducks as assistant strength and conditioning coach. He works with all of Oregon's student-athletes, including overseeing the volleyball and women's basketball teams.

A member of the National Strength and Conditioning Association, Ginther received his undergraduate degree in physical education from Miami (Ohio) in 1984 and a Master of Science degree from Purdue in 1986.

Ginther came to Oregon after serving four years at Purdue as assistant strength-conditioning coach. He also worked as an assistant football and strength coach at Talawanda High School in Oxford, Ohio, for five years.

An avid outdoorsman, the three-sport high school athlete competed in powerlifting and rugby in college and entered marathons and triathlons during the 1980s for enjoyment.

PICK

- Ninth Season
- Greenville College '92

Jeremy Pick enters his ninth year as an assistant strength and conditioning coach at the University of Oregon. In addition to his football duties, Pick also works with the Duck softball, wrestling and volleyball teams.

Prior to his arrival at Oregon, Pick (6-11-69) served as assistant wrestling, football and strength and conditioning coach at Carbondale High School in Illinois.

Upon earning his masters degree in Exercise Physiology in 1994 from Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, Pick became the head wrestling coach at Anna-Jonesboror High School in Anna, Illinois. Pick earned his bachelor degree in 1992 from Greenville College in Illinois where he played linebacker on the football team. He wrestled, played football, ran track and played baseball while in high school.

Pick and his wife Rita have been married eight years. The couple resides in Eugene.

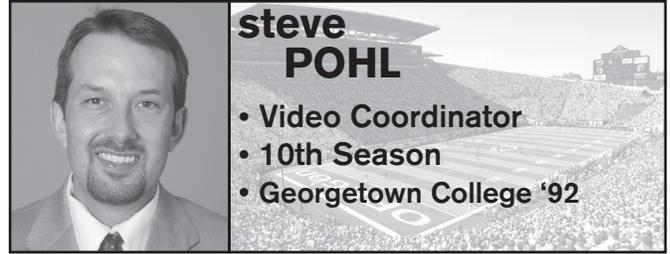

The appearance of Oregon's athletic teams are the efforts of Pat Conrad, the Ducks' equipment manager who is one of the integral parts of the Ducks' football operation.

Conrad, in his 23rd year at Oregon, supervises an equipment staff that includes three assistants, 11 student managers for various sports and six student workers at the Casanova Center and McArthur Court, who are concerned with providing comfort and safety for Oregon's student-athletes during practice and competition.

He is a native of Melcher, Iowa, and attended Ellsworth Community College in his home state. He returned to school seven years later and began with Oregon's football program as a student manager in 1978, majoring in environmental geography.

Conrad was named equipment manager for the entire department in 1981 and now works with numerous coaches in consultation with their needs, including implementation of the Ducks' corporate contract with Nike.

Pat (10-31-50) and wife Jacqueline have two sons, Sean (8-12-83) and Jason (5-23-85).

Steve Pohl is in his 10th season as Oregon's director of video services after serving in the same capacity as a graduate assistant at the University of Illinois for the previous three years.

The Cincinnati, Ohio, native assists the football program with its video evaluation from practices and games in addition to coordinating video projects for recruiting, motivational and instructional tapes and other electronic needs within the department.

Pohl (9-17-70) began his video production career while an undergraduate student at Georgetown College, working as a sports producer at Fox Sports from 1988-92. After obtaining his B.S. degree in communications in 1992, he continued his studies in elementary education at Illinois, earning his master's degree in 1996.

He and his wife, the former Dani Cagle, were married in July of 2005 and have a son, Grant Herring (6-14-96).

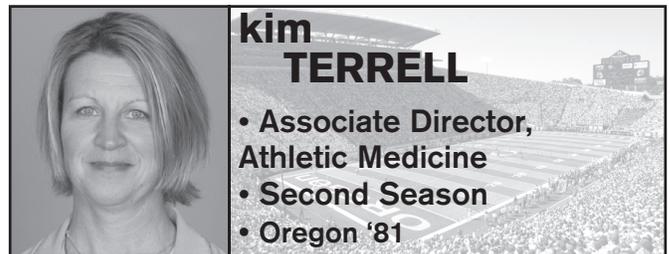

Now in his 13th year with the department, Kevin Steil has been promoted to associate director for athletic medicine as he continues in his eighth season working with the program.

Formerly the trainer for men's basketball and men's track and cross country for three years (1995-1998), Steil worked with Oregon wrestling and tennis and assisted with football his first three years.

The Martinez, Calif., native graduated from Chico State in 1989 with a degree in physical education. He did post-graduate work at Oklahoma State where he earned his master of science in exercise science in 1992. While in Stillwater, Okla., he was a graduate assistant, working with football and wrestling.

Steil worked one year with the Ather Sports Injury Clinic in Castro Valley, Calif., in 1992-93, and served one year as the head athletic trainer at Canada Junior College in Redwood City, Calif., in 1989-90. He also worked with USA Wrestling's national team in 1989-90 and toured Europe for the World Cup and Goodwill Games. A certified member of the National Athletic Trainers Association (NATA), he and his wife Janet have two children: John (Jack) Victor (11-10-98) and Lindsey Ann (4-30-01).

Kim Terrell returned to her alma mater in 2003 following an eight-year stint as Director of Sports Medicine at Northeastern University in Boston.

Terrell was hired by the Ducks in October 2003 and will assist Kevin Steil with the UO's athletic medicine department.

At Northeastern, she oversaw the sports medicine program, and supervised a five-person athletic training staff.

She is on her second tour of duty with the Ducks, as she was an assistant athletic trainer from 1988 to 1995 before moving east.

Terrell earned her bachelor's (1981) and master's (1983) degrees from Oregon in exercise and movement science. After graduation, she took a job as the director of athletic training at The Sport Medicine Clinic in Seattle from 1983 to 1985. She then was hired as an athletic trainer at Sports Injuries and Running Clinic from 1985 to 1988 before returning to Oregon.

Terrell is a member of the National Athletic Trainers Association and a past member of the NATA's Board of Certification.
