Jim Aiken snapped the Ducks' longest post-season drought ever—29 years—when he guided Oregon to the 1949 Cotton Bowl.

C.A. "Shy" Huntington remains as one of the few to both play (1917) and coach (1920) the same school in the Rose Bowl.

Oregon's winningest football coach of all time, Rich Brooks accumulated a 39-32-0 record (.549) over his final six years with the Ducks.

Hugo Bezdek became the first coach to lead three different teams to the Rose Bowl—Oregon, 1917; Mare Island, 1918; Penn State, 1923.

C.W. Spears still owns Oregon's best winning percentage among coaches who guided football teams more than one year.

BELLOTTI

- ▣ Head Coach ▣ 12th Season
- ▣ Career Record: 111-67-2
- ▣ Oregon Record: 90-42-0
- ▣ UC Davis '73

When Mike Bellotti was elevated to head football coach at the University of Oregon on Feb. 13, 1995, few people could have envisioned the impact the former UC Davis honors student would have on a university, as well as a community, which was coming off its first conference championship in 37 years. In the 11 seasons that followed, all he accomplished would be the navigation of a program through its most successful era in school history.

Standing on the verge of becoming the Ducks' winningest football coach of all time, Bellotti has guided Oregon to the No. 2 ranking in the country and a Fiesta Bowl win following the 2001 season, led the school to nine bowl appearances in his 11 years at the helm, tallied eight or more wins in a single season seven times, accumulated the second-most victories (90) of any program in the Pac-10 during his tenure and has overseen a team that has finished among the nation's Top-20 four times in the past seven seasons.

None of his 29 Oregon predecessors can match his timetable for success as well as few in the Pacific-10 Conference. The "dean of the Pac-10" is tied for ninth all time in conference wins (56-32) while only four former league mentors (John Robinson, Don James, Terry Donahue and Larry Smith) were able to post more conference triumphs than Bellotti in their first 10 years in the Pac-10. His 90-42 ledger as the Ducks' head coach (111-67-2 overall) begins the 2006 campaign only one victory shy of Rich Brooks (1977-94) as the winningest football coach in school history, while his winning percentage of 68.2 percent trails only Hugo Bezdek (72.7%—1906, 1913-17) among Oregon's all-time mentors who coached the Ducks a minimum of three seasons.

Guiding the Ducks to an unprecedented seventh-consecutive bowl appearance in 2003, the Northern California native has played a vital role in assembling more than 24 percent (129 wins) of the University's all-time triumphs (532) since assuming the role as the school's offensive coordinator prior to the 1989 season. In addition, only six active Division I coaches in the country have guided their current schools to more postseason appearances than Bellotti has at Oregon while he ranks 16th on the list of winningest active Division I-A coaches in the country.

In 2001, Bellotti coached the Ducks to their first-ever 11-win season as Oregon crushed Colorado, 38-16, in the Fiesta Bowl to finish with an all-time high national ranking of second in the Associated Press and USA Today/ESPN Coaches polls. For his efforts, Bellotti was one of seven finalists for the Paul "Bear" Bryant College Football Coach of the Year Award. Victories in the Fiesta Bowl, Holiday Bowl, Sun Bowl and Las Vegas Bowl have established him as the school's only mentor to coach the Ducks to four postseason wins. Oregon's 10-2 mark in 2000 gave the University its first 10-win season in its history, and seventh- and ninth-place rankings in the year-end AP and USA Today/ESPN Coaches polls. Last year's 10 wins matched the program's second-best ledger ever and its greatest single-season turnaround in 77 years.

The former California State Chico head coach wasted little time leaving his mark on an Oregon program which snapped a 25-year postseason drought in his first season as an assistant in Eugene, with the Ducks surpassing all previous team scoring records in 1989. But not even his initial six-year association with the university, which resulted in the establishment or equivalency of no less than 40 team and individual single-game and season UO records, could prepare Oregon for what was to follow.

Assuming control over a program which had just won its first undisputed Pacific-10 Conference title in school history and received its first Rose Bowl invitation in four decades, it would have been easier to take a moment to reflect on past accomplishments while breaking in a pair of coordinators new to the program. What resulted was a second-consecutive New Year's Day appearance for the first time in school history as the Ducks equaled the previous season's effort with a nine-win season in 1995. Simply put, no first-year coach in the history of Oregon football had ever won as many games (9-3). No other Oregon coach has equalled the number of single-season school-record victories (9) and then raised the bar to 10 and 11 wins. No other football coach has ever posted winning records in his first nine years of his Oregon tenure. It's obvious that Robert Michael Bellotti has Oregon football well in hand.

The Ducks have averaged better than 400 yards total offense in eight of the past 11 seasons. In addition, Bellotti's teams ranked in the top 25 in the country in three major offensive categories five of the past 10 years, completing his first six years ranked among the nation's top-25 in passing offense (15th in 1995; 12th in '96; 20th in '97; 11th in '98; 19th in '99; 25th in '00). Oregon also finished seventh in the country in scoring offense (39.1 ppg) and 10th in total offense (478.2 avg.) in 1998, eighth in the nation in passing (304.5 avg.) and 12th in scoring (34.5 avg.) in 2005, as well as 11th in scoring (35.1 avg.) in '99, 19th in '01 (34.0) and 23rd in '02 (32.1).

Oregon has scored 30 or more points 100 times during Bellotti's tenure (eight of 12 games in 2005) and his offenses have accumulated close to 79,000 yards (78,901)—the most productive period of its length in school history. Bellotti's teams also have averaged 418.1 yards (3,763) and 27.6 points (248) during their last nine bowl appearances. In addition, only nine quarterbacks have thrown for more than 8,000 yards and pitched for more than 60 touchdowns in Pacific-10 Conference history. Bellotti has coached two of them.

Bellotti has led the school to nine bowl appearances in his 11 years at the helm, tallied eight or more wins in a single season seven times, accumulated the second-most victories (90) of any program in the Pac-10 during his tenure.

Bellotti's contingents also have gained the reputation for getting better as the season wears on, with the school accumulating a record of 25-10 in regular-season games after Oct. 31.

Yet throughout all the winning and record-setting, the one quality which remains constant for the 55-year-old offensive architect is poise. As a result of the infectious composure filtering down from the top, the Ducks have prevailed in 41 of the 50 games decided by a touchdown or less in Bellotti's first 132 Oregon head coaching assignments. Serving on the Board of Trustees for the American Football Coaches Association, his passions run much deeper than just the game of football. He sponsors an annual golf tournament, the Mike Bellotti Golf Classic—which raised a record $98,000 in 2003 in its ninth year.

In addition, he donated $25,000 to the university's library system in 2002 to kick off the establishment of the Bellotti Family Fund. He carries with him experience as a head coach in one of the nation's most difficult situations -- a Division II football program that granted no scholarships. In five years at Chico State, the Wildcats finished second in the Northern California Conference four straight years, competing against the tradition-steeped national power UC Davis. That was a task made no easier by the fact that he played for the Aggies and is a graduate of the school.

The opportunity to be judged in the Pacific-10 Conference has showcased his coaching ability. In the 1995 Rose Bowl with more people watching the Ducks than at any time in the school's heritage, Oregon gained more yards than the highly publicized offense of Penn State that had emphatically led the nation in total offense in 1994 and boasted three first-round NFL draft selections. Oregon, led by the game's co-MVP Danny O'Neil, set or tied 15 Rose Bowl records and the Ducks finished the day with 501 yards in total offense. Its sophisticated game plan kept the unbeaten Nittany Lions off balance all afternoon.

Born in Sacramento, Calif., he became the eighth head coach at Oregon since World War II almost six years to the day after assuming the role as the University's offensive coordinator in 1989. He was the fourth offensive coordinator under Rich Brooks and easily the most productive. The Ducks gained more than 4,000 yards in total offense three times in Bellotti's tenure as coordinator, averaging 4,044 yards per year and posting a 39-32-0 record during his six-year assistant coaching stint.

It's to the head coach's credit too, that the 1995 offense averaged more than 400 yards of offensive firepower for the first time since Bellotti's first season as coordinator in 1989.

What They're Saying About Mike Bellotti and the Ducks

"He made the dramatic move of burning down his own offense, the trademark offense he'd used at Oregon since 1989, and that had produced so many school records and three Pac-10 titles. It was, in retrospect, a crystal-clear message that things were going to change at Oregon following the 2004 season."

— Ron Bellamy, Eugene Register-Guard

"While many coaches who aren't terribly smart think they know everything, Bellotti actually is smart but remains open minded and willing to grow. Consider: One of the best offensive minds in the country was willing to re-write his playbook. And it worked. The uniforms? Garish, yes, but they also say something substantive about Bellotti. They say: 'Here's a guy who's not afraid to take chances and to listen to young people instead of allowing grumpy, know-it-all fans and reporters to hold sway.'"

— Ted Miller, Seattle PI

"The Ducks have a history of plugging in another quarterback and watching the system work."

— Bob Clark, The Sporting News

"The offense is cool and the guys on defense aren't afraid to get their Nikes dirty."

— Lindy's

"Mike Bellotti is the best coach no one knows about."

— Dennis Dodd, CBS SportsLine.com

"Oregon coach Mike Bellotti is considered one of the best X-and-O men in the country."

— Bob Cunningham, thehuddle.com

"Part of Bellotti's talent is that he hires good assistants and let's them coach. Bellotti has the confidence to give coordinators real responsibility."

— Brian Meehan, Oregonian

"Oregon is the program that changed the whole feel of the Pac-10 in the '90s. The Ducks blazed the way for the Washington States and Stanfords and everybody else, showing that not only the big three of USC, UCLA and Washington can become league champs and bowl game regulars...perhaps most significantly, they put the rest of the league on notice by ramping up its facilities (building the first indoor practice facility), forcing others to try to keep pace."

— Anthony Gimino, Lindy's

"If you look at all the offensive coordinators over the years that have come through Eugene, it all started with Mike Bellotti. He has an aggressive nature with the play calling, which I appreciate."

— Kirk Herbstreit, ESPN Analyst

His influence proved to be even more successful in 1998 as the Ducks' 5,795 yards and 59 scores eclipsed the school's standards for total offense and touchdowns for the third time in as many years.

During his Oregon tenure, Bellotti has been influential in the development of four Pacific-10 all-conference quarterbacks—Bill Musgrave in 1990, O'Neil in 1994 (who completed his career as the Rose Bowl co-MVP), Akili Smith in 1998 (Oregon's first Pac-10 offensive player of the year in league history) and Joey Harrington in 2001 (Pac-10 offensive player of the year and a Heisman Trophy finalist). In addition, his system has been conducive to two quarterbacks each passing for over 1,000 yards in the same season on three separate occasions (1996, 1997 and 1999) — a feat that had never been accomplished in school history prior to Bellotti's arrival. While the faces have changed, Bellotti's system has been responsible for Oregon ranking among the nation's top-20 in passing offense seven of the last 13 years under nine different quarterbacks as well as five different coordinators. Oregon led the Pacific-10 Conference in scoring his initial year as offensive coordinator in 1989 as well as atop the league in passing in his first year as head coach. Following Oregon's 1989 Independence Bowl trip, Bellotti coached the North offense in the Blue-Gray all-star classic in Montgomery, Ala., on Christmas Day. It was an honor that was duplicated in December 1996 when he was chosen to head the North's defense. He was an assistant coach in the East-West Shine Game in January 1999 and head coach of the West squad for the 2002 game. He also was selected as head coach of the West squad in the 2005 Hula Bowl.

Bellotti's indoctrination as a head coach took place in five seasons at Chico State (1984-88), where he posted a 21-25-2 overall record and a 15-9-2 mark in the Northern California Athletic Conference. He was selected as the league's coach of the year in 1986 when the Wildcats ranked nationally in total offense and finished 7-3-0 with a No. 10 national rating.

A native of Concord, Calif., Bellotti was a 1973 graduate of UC Davis as an honors student majoring in physical education with a combined minor in math and chemistry. He was a second-team all-Far West Conference tight end as a junior and at wide receiver as a senior. He also began his coaching career at Davis as head coach of the JV and receivers coach in addition to coaching the JV baseball squad.

After four years, he moved to Cal State-Hayward as offensive coordinator for two seasons before a one-year stint in the same capacity at Weber State. He returned to Hayward the next year and obtained his master's degree in physical education during a four-year stay before being selected head coach at Chico State in 1984.

Bellotti (12-21-50) has three children; Luke (3-16-85), Keri (10-29-86) and Sean (3-31-94). His oldest son, Luke, is a walk-on junior kicker for the Ducks.

ZOUMBOUKOS

- ▣ Assistant Head Coach
- ▣ Tight Ends
- ▣ 27th Season
- ▣ UC Davis '68

Epitomizing the stability of the university's football program is 27th-year Oregon assistant Neal Zoumboukos, with the team's associate head coach beginning his second straight year coaching the tight ends while overseeing the Ducks' special teams play.

Now is in his 39th year overall in the collegiate coaching ranks, the dean of the Pacific-10 Conference assistants spent all but one of his first 25 years on the Oregon staff tutoring its offensive line. His flexibility was no better demonstrated by playing a role in the development of NFL lineman Adam Snyder, who was chosen as the Pac-10's top offensive lineman in 2004, as well as honing the skills of tight end Josh Wilcox, who established the school's one-game record for most receptions by a tight end (11) in the 1995 Rose Bowl.

Zoumboukos has encountered a great deal of success as an on-the-field technician as well as a recruiter. Under his watchful eye in 2000 and 2001, his unit paved the way for Oregon's eighth and ninth 1,000-yard rushers in Maurice Morris and Onterio Smith. In 2002, the line helped Smith join Morris as the only Ducks to rush for 1,000 yards in back-to-back seasons. In 2003, the Duck line helped anchor an offense that ranked second in the conference in red zone scoring (85.7 percent). In 2004, the offensive line helped running back Terrence Whitehead rush for 1,144 yards, good for second in the Pac-10. As a team, Oregon rushed for over 140 yards per game eight of the previous nine seasons in addition to leading the Pac-10 in fewest quarterback sacks allowed in 2001, 2000 and 1999 before lending his expertise elsewhere.

In 2001, his pupils were responsible for aiding the program's best running attack since 1980, with the Ducks' 196.5 yards per game ranking 25th in the country. In 2002, the Ducks again ranked second in the conference in rushing (147.3 avg.) and featured yet another Pac-10 first-team selection in Smith, while center Dan Weaver was awarded second-team honors.

The 60-year-old Zoumboukos has instilled a work ethic that has benefitted his pupils long after their football careers have ended. He possesses a passion that has prompted many of his former players to follow in their mentor's footsteps into the coaching profession.

Zoumboukos was charged with additional duties as administrative assistant in 1983. He was further elevated to assistant head coach during the spring of 1990, and also assumed many department administrative tasks during former head coach Rich Brooks' two-year stint as athletics director (1992-94).

A graduate of UC Davis, Zoumboukos coached in two different stretches at his alma mater for eight seasons. Following a three-year stint at San Francisco, he returned to Davis where the Mustangs won seven straight Far West Conference championships and were ranked No. 1 in Division II in 1977.

 □ Defensive Coordinator
 □ 16th Season
 □ UC Davis '68

Now in his third stint with the Ducks, Nick Aliotti continues to mentor the Oregon defense with a familiarly aggressive, and always innovative flair.

Credited with orchestrating the "Gang Green" defense that helped propel Oregon to the Rose Bowl following the 1994 season, Aliotti is one of the school's most popular assistants in recent memory. Returning to the position prior to the 1999 season where he enjoyed his greatest success, the energetic Aliotti is in his 16th overall campaign with the Ducks in addition to his one season heading the defense at UCLA and three years in the NFL.

Despite failing to attract the attention that surrounded the '94 conference championship campaign, last season's defensive coaching effort may have been one of his best. Oregon led the conference in total defense (357.7 avg.) for the first time since 1958, and in passing defense (223.8) for the second time in six seasons. The Ducks also allowed their fewest points per game (23.2 avg.) in four years and ranked 10th in the country in turnover margin, thanks in part to 23 interceptions (Oregon's since 1968) -- the second-most in the country in 2005.

Employing a philosophy of focusing on opponents' running game, he helped Oregon rank 16th nationally against the run (107.1 avg.) in 2003. In 2004, the Ducks remained strong against the run, ranking 27th nationally (122.9 avg.). During the Ducks' Fiesta Bowl season of 2001, Oregon limited teams to 115.3 avg. against the run -- its best since its 1994 Rose Bowl year -- while ranking second in the league. For his efforts that season, Aliotti was rewarded by being an AFLAC National Assistant Coach-of-the-Year recipient. In his first season in his current stint in Eugene in 2000, the Ducks led the Pac-10 in passing defense and stood second in scoring defense.

Under his guidance, Oregon's defense has held five of its opponents at 100 yards or less per game rushing in five of the last six years and four foes to the century mark last season. However, few performances may have been more impressive than limiting No. 3 Michigan to a paltry -3 rushing yards in the 31-27 upset of the Wolverines in 2003. Another equally impressive performance included limiting the ground attack of Colorado to just 49 yards in the 2002 Fiesta Bowl triumph. In 2004, the Ducks' defense stood tall against Stanford, holding the Cardinal to -8 yards rushing in a 16-13 Oregon victory in Palo Alto, Calif.

The 52-year-old's additional career highlights include taking a unit ranked eighth in the Pac-10 in defense in the first year of his previous Oregon tenure in 1993 and molding it into one that ranked among the nation's top-20 defending the run (12th, 112.4 ypg avg.), pass (14th) and in scoring defense (20th, 17.7 avg.). He also helped design defenses which finished among the top 20 nationally in one of four major defensive categories on 10 occasions.

During his 15 years on the Oregon staff, Aliotti has coached 21 defensive players selected in the NFL draft, including 2004 draftees, second round defensive tackles Igor Olshansky and Junior Siavii and sixth-round pick, free safety Keith Lewis.

After his departure following the school's first outright Pac-10 title ever and its first Rose Bowl appearance in 37 years, the Northern California native served as a defensive assistant and special teams coach with the St. Louis Rams from 1995-97 before returning to the collegiate ranks in 1998.

As a player, Aliotti was a three-year letterman as a running back at UC Davis, earning freshman team MVP honors in 1972 and Far Western Conference accolades his senior season.

This marks his fourth tour of duty alongside Mike Bellotti, with the duo first coaching together at their alma mater in 1976, followed by four years at Chico State and the previous Oregon tenure (1989-94).

CROWTON
 □ Offensive Coordinator
 □ Quarterbacks
 □ Second Season

Gary Crowton wasted no time in making his presence felt on an Oregon offense in need of a transfusion as he played a major role in the transformation of an attack that finished his initial year in Eugene among the best in school history. Yet the results weren't much different than those accumulated in seven years as a head coach at the Division I level and seven previous seasons as a collegiate and NFL offensive coordinator.

Armed with the reputation of producing some of the most exciting and productive offenses in the country, the 48-year-old Orem, Utah, native assisted in elevating the Ducks among the top 20 in the country in passing (8th), scoring (12th) and total offense (18th), in addition to the refinement of quarterback Kellen Clemens to levels surpassed by few in the nation prior to his season-ending injury. Oregon's 304.5 passing yards and 34.5 points per game proved to be the second-best marks in school history, trailing only those posted in 1998.

Only four times was Oregon held under 30 points in 2005, with the Ducks managing to prevail on two of the occasions.

His talents ran far beyond his experience coaching one-back offensive schemes that excelled at putting pressure on the opposition. His quarterback development skills were most evident when he was forced to successfully prepare a tandem of relatively untested quarterbacks late in the season which resulted in Oregon winning four of its final five games.

For his efforts Crowton was one of six finalists for the Broyles Award, annually given to the top collegiate assistant football coach in the country.

Crowton arrived at Oregon in time for the 2005 spring drills after accumulating a 47-36 record in stints as a head coach at BYU (2001-04) and Louisiana Tech (1996-98), as well as two years as offensive coordinator with the Chicago Bears (1999-2000) in the National Football League.

In his first year guiding the Cougars, Crowton devised an aggressive attack which led the nation in total offense (542.9 avg.) and scoring (46.8 avg.), while BYU finished 2001 with a 12-2 record and a Mountain West Conference championship. For his efforts, he was named conference and district coach of the year. During his head-coaching tenure in Provo, the Cougars averaged better than 409 yards of total offense while tallying a 26-23 ledger.

Top: Toriana, Gary, Malen and Janessa; Middle: Quinn and Mikauli
 Bottom: Macloud

In 1999 with the Chicago Bears, his offense ranked third in the NFL in passing (258.5 avg.) and established a franchise record with 4,136 yards through the air, as well as eighth in the league in total offense (345.2 avg.).

In three seasons as head coach at Louisiana Tech, Crowton built an offenses that tallied 12,745 yards (374.9 per game avg.) and 115 touchdowns passing. In his final season, the Bulldogs passed for a school-record 4,943 yards while leading the country in passing (432.1 avg.) and finishing second in total offense (542.0 avg.). Louisiana Tech also scored 50 or more points in eight of 12 games in 1998 while eclipsing 300 yards passing on 10 occasions.

In 1997, Louisiana Tech ranked third in the country in both passing (360.5 avg.) and total offense (496.0 avg.). He accumulated a record of 21-13 at the Ruston, La., school, including a 9-2 slate in 1997.

Crowton began his 24-year coaching career as a student assistant under LaVell Edwards in 1982 at BYU, where he earned his bachelor's degree in physical education in 1983. He proceeded to serve as secondary coach at Snow (Utah) Junior College in 1983 before becoming offensive coordinator at the school for the next three seasons. During his stint, he helped lead Snow to the National Junior College Athletic Association national championship in 1985.

He then served as passing game coordinator at Western Illinois for one year (1987), followed by offensive coordinator at New Hampshire (1988-90), quarterbacks coach at Boston College (1991-93), co-offensive coordinator at Georgia Tech (1994), and offensive coordinator at Louisiana Tech (1995). Crowton was elevated to head coach the following year.

Among the standouts he has tutored are Luke Staley, who was the recipient of the Doak Walker Award as the nation's top running back and led the nation in scoring at BYU in 2001; Troy Edwards, Louisiana Tech's 1998 Biletnikoff Award honoree as the top collegiate receiver in the country; Louisiana Tech quarterback Tim Rattay, who finished 10th in balloting for the Heisman Trophy in 1999; and Glenn Foley, who finished fifth in the Heisman Trophy voting in 1993.

The former all-league quarterback at Orem High School earned All-America acclaim at Snow Junior College before completing his football career as a quarterback, wide receiver and defensive back at Colorado State in 1978. He then ran track for one year at Idaho State before earning his degree at BYU.

CAMPBELL

- ▣ Running Backs
- ▣ 24th Season
- ▣ UCLA '73

If his players are a reflection on a coach, then Gary Campbell has logged an outstanding 23-year career working with Oregon's offensive backs. In the pass-happy Pacific-10 Conference, he has helped Oregon keep the alternative prominent in the Ducks' attack while priding himself in the expansion of his pupils' talents beyond just one dimension.

Among the school's ten 1,000-yard single-season rushers, Campbell has coached eight of them. Yet a pair of those running backs also tallied more than 50 receptions in one year.

No better example of that flexibility can be offered than Terrence Whitehead. In 2004, Whitehead rushed for 1,144 yards, good for second in the Pac-10. The following season, his talents as a receiver were utilized as an extension of the Ducks' running game as the program's second-leading rusher of all time caught 52 passes for 490 yards to compliment his 679 yards on the ground. He became only the second player in school history to accumulate 100 or more yards rushing and receiving in the same game.

In 2003, despite not producing a 1,000-yard rusher, the Ducks still managed to finish fourth in the Pac-10 in rush offense.

Since 1997, Oregon running backs have produced 48 100-yard rushing performances.

In addition to his responsibilities coaching Oregon's running backs, Campbell was in charge of the team's kickoff return game which led the Pac-10 (9th in the country) as well as featured the nation's top individual kickoff returner in Jonathan Stewart (33.67 avg.).

Campbell's tutelage helped Onterrio Smith (2001, '02), Maurice Morris (2000, '01) and Reuben Droughns (1999) become the seventh, eighth and ninth 1,000-yard rushers in Oregon history -- the first time the Ducks ever boasted of consecutive 1,000-yard ground-gainers. Droughns and Smith were honored as his fourth and fifth, first-team all-conference pupils in 1995 and 2002. Morris, a second-round NFL pick in 2002, became the first back-to-back 1,000-yard rusher in school history, and Smith, another NFL draft choice, followed suit in 2001 and '02.

The Ennis, Texas, native's efforts have been extremely visible in the school's record books. Ten of the Ducks' top-11 single-season rushing totals have been recorded by Campbell proteges. Campbell's backs own Oregon's top four career rushing totals and eight of its top-10. In addition, Smith set the school single-game rushing record under Campbell's watch, gaining 285 yards at Washington State in 2002.

A proponent of the importance of developing running backs' all-around game, he successfully tutored the school's first conference rushing champion in 26 years and single-season rushing leader Saladin McCullough. One of the Ducks' best tailbacks ever also established a school record by rushing for 15 TDs in only seven games in 1996 and equaled a Pac-10 record with five touchdowns in one outing. In 1995, Campbell brought the potentially outstanding career of senior tailback Ricky Whittle to fruition. Whittle crushed Oregon's one season all-purpose yardage record prior to McCullough bettering it, and became the program's first running back ever to haul in 50 passes.

In 1998, he honed the talents of Droughns into becoming the first player in school history to rush for better than 200 yards in more than one game in the same season before injuries halted his ascension as one of the nation's best.

A former starting fullback at UCLA, the 53-year-old Campbell came to Oregon in 1983 after one season at Pacific.

In addition to his playing days at UCLA in the early 1970s, where he scored two touchdowns in one of Oregon's biggest victories ever (1970, 41-40), he was a graduate assistant for the Bruins in 1976-78.

Since coming to Oregon, Campbell has furthered the careers of countless talents, including former 11-year NFL veteran Derek Loville. Tony Cherry and Loville were both Pacific-10 Conference rushing runners-up during their collegiate career, while McCullough and Droughns averaged better than 100 yards per game during their collegiate tenures.

PFLUGRAD

- Wide Receivers
- First Season
- Portland State '80

Robin Pflugrad begins his first season coaching the Ducks' wide receivers after spending the past five years mentoring the tight ends and serving as recruiting coordinator at Washington State.

The 47-year-old Eugene native, who was elevated to the Cougars' assistant head coaching position in 2003, brings with him 26 years of coaching experience -- 25 of those at the collegiate level -- as well as 11 seasons of experience in the Pacific-10 Conference under his belt. The 1976 North Eugene High School graduate returns to his hometown in a professional capacity for the first time since 1981 but is enjoying his first association with the University of Oregon.

While at Washington State, Pflugrad was responsible for coordinating the recruiting efforts of its 2004 class which was considered its most decorated in school history. Among his many successful pupils was the Pacific-10 Conference's second-team all-league tight end from a year ago, Troy Bienemann. During his tenure, the Cougars paced the league in passing offense in 2001.

Throughout his career, he has played a role in the development of seven quarterbacks or receivers who have claimed All-America acclaim, 27 all-conference honorees, 152 academic all-conference student-athletes and 12 academic All-Americans. He coached with two schools (Arizona State in 1996; Washington State in 2002) that represented the Pac-10 in the Rose Bowl.

He began his coaching career as a graduate assistant at Portland State in 1980 before spending one year as a receivers and secondary coach at South Eugene High School in 1981. Pflugrad returned to Portland State for a four year-stint in 1982, first as a part-time assistant coach and director of football promotions and later as a full-time assistant working with wide receivers and tight ends.

From there he migrated to the University of Montana (1986-94) to work with the quarterbacks, running backs and wide receivers, and was promoted to assistant head coach in 1991. Among his standouts was Dave Dickenson, who won the Walter Payton Award (given to the most outstanding player in NCAA Division I-AA), broke 25 school records and three national marks, and came close to helping the Grizzlies beat the Ducks in Eugene in 1993. (Oregon won, 35-30.)

He helped lay much of the foundation for the 1994 Montana team which claimed the NCAA I-AA national championship.

Pflugrad moved to Arizona State (1995-2000) as recruiting coordinator and receivers coach, tutoring the likes of two-time first-team all-conference standouts Keith Poole and Todd Heap, as well as the school's single-season receiving leader, Shaun McDonald. The Sun Devils led the Pac-10 in rushing offense in 1996 and '97; total offense and scoring in 1996; and passing offense in 2000.

He spent the spring of 2001 as offensive coordinator and assistant head coach at Northern Arizona before receiving his opportunity at Washington State prior to the 2001 season.

The 1980 Portland State graduate in business administration earned All-America honors as a wide receiver and team captain as a senior in 1979.

GRAY

- ▣ Defensive Line
- ▣ Second Season
- ▣ Oregon '84

The return of Michael Gray to his alma mater as defensive line coach in 2005 helped instill an aggressive demeanor and toughness to a unit which gave up fewer touchdowns on the ground than any other school in the Pacific-10 Conference and tied for 18th in the country in fewest rushing touchdowns allowed.

The Ducks' former two-year starting defensive lineman benefited from a group of experienced returnees yet added his own touch to a contingent which included tackle Haloti Ngata becoming the school's first consensus All-American in 43 years.

The 14th-year veteran in the collegiate and professional coaching ranks came to Oregon following two years as defensive line coach at the University of Kentucky, where he served a second coaching stint under his former college mentor Rich Brooks. The 46-year-old Gray has encountered tremendous success in 10 years of coaching at the Division I level, including seven seasons of experience in the Pac-10 Conference. Over the last eight campaigns, the Baltimore, Md., native has been responsible for the development of six first-team all-conference standouts, as well as one league defensive player-of-the-year, in addition to assisting with the structuring of units which twice ranked among the top 15 in the country in rushing defense since 2000.

He enjoyed a bulk of his notoriety in six seasons as defensive line coach at Oregon State (1997-2002) when the school went to three bowl games in his final four seasons there. In 2000, Oregon State led the Pac-10 in total defense (314.4 avg.) and scoring defense (18.5 avg.), while ranking second against the run (93.1 avg.). On a national scale, the defense finished 20th, 19th and 13th, respectively, with the Beavers capping their 11-1 record with a 41-9 Fiesta Bowl rout over Notre Dame.

In 2002, he assisted units that ranked second in the league in total defense (11th nationally) and scoring defense (27th), as well as third in rushing defense (9th).

A year ago, Oregon led the Pac-10 in total defense (357.7 avg.) and pass defense (223.8 avg.) while finishing third in scoring defense (23.2) and fourth against the run (133.9 avg.). Ngata led the Pac-10 in tackles among interior linemen (61) as well as was named team MVP.

At Kentucky, Gray played a role in the overall improvement of the defense in 2003 over the previous year, with Sweet Pea Burns earning first-team all-Southeastern Conference accolades while leading the league in tackles for loss, and Lamar Mills' selection as a first-team Freshman All-American. In 2004, Ricky Abren was named a second-team Freshman All-American.

Gray broke into the coaching ranks as an assistant for two years with British Columbia of the Canadian Football League (1993-94), where he was associated with winning a Grey Cup championship in 1994, before migrating to Weber State (1995) and the St. Louis Rams (1996) of the National Football League.

Gray first joined the Ducks in 1981 as a junior college All-American from West Hills (Calif.) College before graduating from Oregon with a bachelor's degree in Recreation and Park Management in 1984. Following his first season, he was the recipient of the Len Casanova Award as the program's top newcomer. He completed his Oregon career (1981-82) recording 78 tackles and recovering two fumbles.

He continued his playing career as a two-time all-conference pick during eight years in the CFL with British Columbia (1985-86) and Winnipeg (1987-92). Along the way, Gray played for teams that won three Grey Cup Championships (British Columbia in 1985; Winnipeg in 1988, 1990) in addition to being named the league's Most Outstanding Rookie in 1985 and Grey Cup Defensive Player of the Game in '88.

GREATWOOD

- ▣ Offensive Line
- ▣ 22nd Season
- ▣ Oregon '80

Steve Greatwood embraced his return to coaching the Ducks' offense line a year ago -- a position he previously held for 13 of his first 25 years in the profession -- as he begins his 22nd season on the staff of his alma mater. The Eugene native returned to Oregon as its defensive line coach prior to the 2000 season following a five-year hiatus, two of which he spent coaching in the NFL.

The 47-year-old Greatwood was an integral part of Oregon's coaching staff for the first 15 seasons of his career that concluded with a berth in the 1995 Rose Bowl, and concentrated his efforts on the offensive line from 1982-94. That included the last six years of his previous tenure with the Ducks working with then-offensive coordinator Mike Bellotti.

His impact on the offensive line paid immediate dividends as he molded a relatively inexperienced group that included only two returning starters into one that was forced to quickly adapt to a new offensive scheme. The result was an offense which improved from 10th to third in the Pacific-10 Conference in quarterback sacks allowed last season (20) as well as ranked among the top 20 in the country in three of four major offensive categories.

Two of Greatwood's offensive linemen were recipients of all-league accolades a year ago, with center Enoka Lucas attracting second-team honors and redshirt freshman Max Unger honorable mention acclaim as well as Freshman All-America kudos.

While overseeing the defensive line in 2004, the Ducks held their opponents to 122.1 yards per game on the ground -- the fifth consecutive season under Greatwood the UO defensive line has helped hold its opponents under 125 yards per game rushing.

In 2003, the Duck defensive line helped post a 16th national ranking against the run (107.1 ypg.), highlighted by three all-league defensive linemen (Junior Siavii, Igor Olshansky and Devan Long). Both Olshansky and Siavii were drafted in the second round of the 2004 NFL draft.

Oregon's rushing defense ranked first in the conference in 2000 (118.2 avg.) and second in 2001 (115.3 avg.), while the 2002 unit allowed 118.2 yards per game to rank 25th nationally, thanks to all-conference picks Haloti Ngata and Olshansky.

Emmy, Sheri, Kallie, Steve and Tessa Greatwood

Greatwood's defensive lines have held opponents to negative rushing yards on four occasions in the five seasons, including -3 net yards by No. 3 Michigan in 2003, and limited a Colorado team that came into the 2002 Fiesta Bowl ranked eighth in the country in rushing (228.5 avg.) to only 49 yards.

Following the 1994 season and Oregon's Pacific-10 Conference championship, Greatwood departed with former Ducks' head coach Rich Brooks to coach the offensive line and tight ends with the St. Louis Rams. He rejoined the collegiate ranks in 1997 at Maryland before returning to the West Coast the following year and heading the offensive line at USC. During his stay with the Trojans, Oregon's former three-year starting offensive guard aided in the development of two-time all-conference lineman and All-American Travis Claridge -- a second-round NFL draft pick.

In addition to his various coaching duties along the offensive line, Greatwood spent all but one year of his previous stint as a full-time Oregon assistant also tutoring the team's tight ends. Included among his more decorated pupils were team MVP and all-conference tight end Doug Herman (1984), the Ducks' receiving leader Bobby DeBisschop (1986), as well as tight ends Jeff Thomason and Willy Tate, both who encountered stints in the NFL.

Under his guidance, Oregon enjoyed its greatest success running the football within an 18-year span, with the 160.7-yard average and 20 TDs in 1988 representing an eight-year pinnacle. The Ducks ascended to third in the Pac-10 in rushing in 1989 (14th in the country in scoring), with the program surpassing no fewer than 21 team and individual records. He also assisted in molding the front line which aided the school's career rushing leader.

The former Churchill High School standout completed his playing career with an appearance in the Hula Bowl in 1980 and was the recipient of the Bob Officer Award, given to the Oregon player who makes a major contribution to the success of the program despite physical adversity. Greatwood later signed as a free agent with the San Francisco 49ers before initiating his coaching career as the Ducks' defensive graduate assistant for two years.

NEAL

- Secondary
- Fourth Season
- Brigham Young '80

John Neal, who has accumulated 22 years of experience tutoring defensive secondaries in the Pacific-10, Southeastern, Conference USA and Western Athletic conferences, enters his fourth season with Oregon, with the Ducks displaying major improvements every season.

The personable Mountain View, Calif., native has fostered an aggressive mentality amongst his players at every place he has coached that is conducive to his defenders focusing on the football as much as opponents' receivers. The result has been the building of secondaries that have been among the nation's leaders in interceptions.

Oregon finished 2005 second in the country with 23 interceptions, marking the program's most thefts in 37 years, as well as the Pacific-10 Conference's runner-up in pass efficiency defense (26th nationally). He played a major role in the Ducks leading the league in total defense for the first time since 1958 as well as pass defense.

He has been credited with much of the development of his players as well, with three of last year's secondary earning all-conference honors. Cornerback Justin Phinisee was named to the Pac-10's first-team all-conference unit, second-team recipient Aaron Gipson also was a second-team All-America recipient after leading the nation in interceptions (7), while redshirt freshman Patrick Chung was tabbed as the league's defensive freshman of the year by The Sporting News.

In Neal's first two seasons at Oregon, its pass defense improved from a 291.2 avg. in 2002 to 216.8 avg. in 2004. Another vast improvement was the team's pass efficiency defense, ranking 46th (120.7, 2003) and 57th (121.8, 2004) nationally after landing at 102nd (140.8) in 2002.

Prior to arriving at Oregon during the spring of 2003, the 49-year-old Neal spent eight seasons coaching the defensive backs at Alabama- Birmingham. He served as defensive coordinator his last two seasons at UAB, where the Blazers ranked fifth in the country in total defense in 2001 (265.9 avg.). UAB was also among the national defensive leaders in 2000, ranking ninth in the country in scoring defense and 11th in total defense.

In 1999, the Blazers were third nationally in interceptions (19), while the 1997 squad was ninth nationally in pass efficiency defense. Three UAB defensive backs from those teams are currently playing in the NFL: second-team All-American Rodregis Brooks (Indianapolis), Izell Reese (Denver) and Dainon Sidney (Tennessee).

Helping UAB upgrade from the NCAA Division I-AA level to full I-A status in Conference USA, Neal assisted in building the Blazers' program in many ways aside from his work in the secondary. He volunteered to be the team's recruiting coordinator, a position he held for six years. He also assumed duties with UAB's special teams, instructing punters, the punt return team and kick return team at some point during his eight-year tenure. The Blazers blocked nine punts, returning five for touchdowns, during a two-year span from 1999-2000.

Before moving to UAB in 1995, Neal served as secondary coach at Mississippi from 1992-94. His 1993 squad led the nation in total defense (234.5 avg.) and ranked third against the pass while allowing the fewest touchdown passes in the country (5). The Rebels finished sixth nationally in pass defense while leading the SEC in 1994.

Neal sandwiched a pair of stints as defensive coordinator at Pacific (1990-91) and East Tennessee State (1986) around a three-year tenure as defensive backs coach at Oregon State (1987-89). The Beavers ranked second in the Pac-10 in pass defense in 1987 (183.3 avg.).

The 1980 graduate of Brigham Young was a two-year letterman for the Cougars in 1978-79, earning all-WAC honors at defensive back as a senior. He transferred to BYU after playing two seasons at Foothill Junior College (Los Altos Hills, Calif.).

He broke into the coaching profession as a graduate assistant at his alma mater in the spring of 1980 before moving to New Mexico to coach the Lobos' junior varsity team that fall. Neal was elevated to full-time assistant coach at New Mexico in 1981, where he coached linebackers and defensive backs through the 1985 campaign. The Lobos led the WAC in defense in 1982 and 1983 and finished the 1982 campaign with a 10-1 record.

PELLUM

- ▣ Linebackers
- ▣ 18th Season
- ▣ Oregon '85

Few coaches have been as successful developing unproven talent as 16th-year Oregon assistant Don Pellum, who also continues to coordinate much of the program's recruiting efforts.

Completing his playing career with the Ducks in 1984, the former starting linebacker continued his association with his alma mater in 1985 as a graduate assistant coach. Since then, his tenure has covered a number of responsibilities, including recruiting coordinator as well as coaching Oregon's linebackers, safeties and defensive line. He has remained at Oregon ever since, with the exception of a one-year stint as defensive line coach, strength coach and academic coordinator at Willamette University in 1987 and three years heading up the recruiting efforts at the University of California (1990-92).

Pellum has developed a knack for bringing out the best from his players while concerning himself with their development aside from football as well. His players have led Oregon's defense in quarterback sacks eight of the last 13 years, including 26 of the Ducks' 38 sacks in 1999 by the defensive front four. Duck fans also fondly remember an inexperienced group prior to the 1994 campaign that keyed back-to-back New Year's Day bowl appearances following the 1994 and '95 campaigns.

Yet few of his accomplishments could be any more rewarding than a year ago when he transformed a unit which included only one returnee with any significant line-of-scrimmage experience at the major college level. What resulted was one that helped Oregon lead the Pacific-10 Conference in total defense and pass defense, in addition to finishing third in scoring defense. While his trio of 2005 starters began last season accumulating only 89 tackles during their Oregon careers, they tallied 207 between them last year alone.

Included was second-team all-conference outside linebacker

Anthony Trucks, who led the team with 99 tackles en route to pacing the Pac-10 in quarterback sacks (11, tied for 8th in the nation), tackles for loss (15.5) and forced fumbles (5, tied for 7th nationally). In all, he has been credited with much of the development for 17 Pac-10 all-league honorees in the last 13 seasons, including 2002 NFL draft choice Wesly Mallard.

One of Oregon's most popular former players, Pellum returned to coaching on a full-time basis in 1993 following six years as a recruiting coordinator in the Pac-10.

Pellum was responsible with assembling outstanding recruiting classes while at Oregon and California, and has been responsible for directing some of the Ducks' best recruiting efforts in school history since his return. His recruiting efforts help land him on the list among the nation's top 25 recruiters by Rivals.com after the Ducks were named the No. 12 recruiting class in the country.

The 44-year-old Banning, Calif., native was a graduate assistant at Oregon for two years while completing an advanced degree in telecommunications and film, coaching the tight ends, and assembling the scout teams. He also has completed some work toward his Ph.D.

RADCLIFFE

- Strength and Conditioning
- 22nd Season
- Pacific (Ore.) '80

Jim Radcliffe, Oregon's head strength and conditioning coach for the last 19 seasons, plays a significant role in the Ducks' football program as the designer of the year-round development calendar.

Radcliffe, who guided the receivers during much of the 1999 fall camp, furnishes the student-athletes with a wide variety of exercise through weight training and lifting systems, and is a noted authority in the field of exercises dealing with the improvement of speed and quickness.

The 48-year-old native of McCloud, Calif., became assistant strength coach at Oregon in 1985, a position he held for two years before assuming the duties of head coach in that area.

Radcliffe taught and coached a variety of sports and was the athletic trainer for four years at Aloha High School from 1980-83.

He then did graduate study at Colorado and worked in private business prior to joining the Ducks' staff. Graduating from Pacific (Ore.) in Forest Grove, he played four seasons at defensive back and was captain of the special teams. Radcliffe earned his Master's in biomechanics from Oregon in 1992.

Radcliffe is active in national organizations surrounding his profession and is certified by the United States Weightlifting Federation. He also has written books, been published in numerous professional journals and produced videos on plyometrics, one of the most effective exercise techniques.

Jeff Hawkins is in his sixth season as Oregon's director of football operations. Hawkins, 52, served in a similar position under Mike Bellotti at Chico State from 1985-87. He also had stints as an assistant coach and recruiting coordinator at Dartmouth (1987-91) and Tulane (1992-95).

Originally from Kingston, Mass., Hawkins spent three years in the Army following his 1972 graduation from Silver Lake High School where his teammates included current college head coaches Buddy Teevens (Stanford) and Tim Murphy (Harvard). After completing his tour and receiving an honorable discharge, Hawkins attended Bridgewater State, where he started all four years on the defensive line and was named co-captain his senior year.

After earning his bachelor's degree in physical education from Bridgewater State, he spent the five years in the front office of the NFL's New England Patriots before joining Bellotti at Chico State.

Prior to coming to Oregon, he lived in New Orleans for 10 years where he worked at Tulane and later served as director of special projects for the Sugar Bowl (1996-01) and vice president of the Special Olympics Louisiana for four years. He regularly worked game-day assignments with Tulane and the New Orleans Saints.

Jeff and his wife Amy live in Eugene and had their first child, daughter Gabrielle, in August 2003.

Jeff Eberhart begins his first season as the assistant director of football operations, but is in his eighth year working within the University of Oregon athletic department. Eberhart, 38, most recently served as the program's football secretary since 2001.

In his new role, Eberhart deals primarily with the external operations, including the organization of all unofficial and official recruiting visits as well as maintaining the Ducks' video library.

Prior to working in the football office, Eberhart served as the secretary for the track, soccer, softball, men's and women's tennis and women's golf program's in 2000. He began his career in the sports information office in 1998 where he was a student worker before becoming a full-time intern in 1999.

A native of Mill Valley, Calif., Eberhart graduated from Tamalpais High School in 1986. He played both basketball and baseball in high school. Upon graduation, he attended the University of Oregon and received a degree in both journalism and English.

Eberhart and his wife Michelle reside in Eugene and have three children, Matthew (9-25-88), Treyla (4-23-90) and Tasha (8-8-93).

TERRELL

- Associate Director, Athletic Medicine
- Third Season
- Oregon '81

Kim Terrell returned to her alma mater in 2003 following an eight-year stint as Director of Sports Medicine at Northeastern University in Boston.

Terrell was hired by the Ducks in October 2003 and will assist Kevin Steil with the UO's athletic medicine department.

At Northeastern, she oversaw the sports medicine program, and supervised a five-person athletic training staff.

She is on her second tour of duty with the Ducks, as she was an assistant athletic trainer from 1988 to 1995 before moving east.

Terrell earned her bachelor's (1981) and master's (1983) degrees from Oregon in exercise and movement science. After graduation, she took a job as the director of athletic training at The Sport Medicine Clinic in Seattle from 1983 to 1985. She then was hired as an athletic trainer at Sports Injuries and Running Clinic from 1985 to 1988 before returning to Oregon.

Terrell is a member of the National Athletic Trainers Association and a past member of the NATA's Board of Certification.
