Introduction

Password, Inc. is a program which you can use to store a list of passwords. It can be valuable for anyone using the Internet or an on-line service as you can store various login names and passwords for dial up connections and to access your e-mail accounts.

Using Password, Inc. for each entry you can store a Service Name, a User Name, a Password and an Expire date. You can have any number of entries, limited only by your available disk space.

Password, Inc. requires you to remember only one password, and that is the password to start this program. Without this, others cannot access your list of passwords.

How To...

To add a new password to your list:

From the Password menu, select New, or click on the New Password icon on the toolbar.

To remove a password from the list:

From the Password menu, select Delete, or click on the Delete Password icon on the toolbar.

To modify a password or change your user settings:

From the Password menu, select Edit, or click on the Edit Password icon on the toolbar.

To configure the program settings to suit your needs:

From the Password menu, select Preferences, or click on the Preferences icon on the toolbar.

To exit from Password, Inc. and return to Windows:

From the Password menu, select Close, or click on the Close icon on the toolbar.

What you need to know...

This version of Password, Inc. is absolutely FREE. Use it as you like, and you may distribute it to friends if you think they'd find it useful.

The only thing I'd expect in return is that you send me an e-mail telling me what you think of it, and if you have any suggestions for improvement. I'd also love to know how far Password, Inc. got from home. I'm sure it loves to travel [just like me] :)

Of course, you can also send me bug-reports or any problem you may have with Password, Inc. If anyone is interested in knowing more about the interface and the programming tool I used, I'll be glad to share that info.

Once again, thank you for using Password, Inc. Enjoy!
