

Hello readme file reader !

This program is a Norton Commander clone. As with any program that has some complexity, I always provide some translation hints for international users.

This program has two columns like the Norton Commander. With the buttons in between, you can perform some operations that computer users use to do on files. For example, when you want to rename a directory in the left directory list box, you have to highlight this directory and then click on the left button with the caption <Umbenennen. The button with the Umbenennen> caption will take action on the directory list box on the left. The Löschen button deletes a directory, the neues Verzeichnis button creates one. The side of the button determines which directory list box it is affiliated.

With the --->Kopieren---> button, you can copy files from the left to the right file list box, with the <---Kopieren<--- button, you can copy files from right to left. A similar thing is performed with those --->Verschieben---> and <---Verschieben<--- buttons, but here the files are moved, not copied. Umbenennen means „rename“, Löschen means „delete“, Attribute means, I think you guessed it, „attributes“, and Auswahl means „choice“, you can change the file extension display with this one.

As far as the Attribute dialog is concerned, there are two words that you may not know, as there are: Versteckt, which means „hidden“, and Nur lesen, which means „read only“. The other two words, Archiv and System mean exactly what you think.

When you delete files or directories, a security query will be shown. It reads: Die Löschaktion muß bestätigt werden. Verzeichnis löschen?, this means: „The deleting of the directory has to be confirmed. Delete directory?“. Then you can choose Ja or Nein. It means „yes“ or „no“. Deleting operations do not move the files to the trashcan, but will remove them conventionally!
