

Safety of telephones

Telephones use a very small amount of electricity and are not wired in the same way as other household domestic appliances. The risk of electric shock from a telephone is negligible.