

The Shared Approach to Memory

Shared-cache designs maintain cache coherency—ensuring that the two CPUs' data doesn't get out of sync—by using the Pentium's built-in MESI protocol. This standard flags entries in the cache to indicate which processor owns what, and where current data resides.

