Software presentation

Starlogin is software that combines astrological and astronomical functions and data, and some features about the future soul horoscope.

When Starlogin is running, the main window shows:

- A Menu and its submenus,
- An initial Title bar with only two buttons,
- A status bar.

Menu and submenus

Menu and submenus are organized into the following hierarchy:

Main

- Event
- Read a chart
- Filters and statistics
- Calculator
- Print configuration
- Print
- Quit

Main functions

- To add, modify or delete an astrological event.
- To read a saved chart.
- Filters and statistics about the events.
- Windows 95 calculator.
- Printer configuration.
- To print a chart or an other document.
- To quit Starlogin.

Title bar buttons

The title bar initially presents the "Event" and "Quit" buttons, that respectively allow:
to consult, choose, add, modify or delete astrological events in Starlogin database.
to close Starlogin.

It shows seven buttons as soon as an event is selected (with the "Event" button or by clicking on "event" submenu in "Main" menu). The additional buttons are:

"Calculate" to calculate the event chart, with selected options,

"Revolutions" to calculate planets cycles, revolutions and symbolic cycles,

"Transits" to calculate the event chart transits,

"Directions" to calculate primary, secondary or symbolic directions,

"comparaisoNs" to calculate Combinations or comparisons.

It shows its maximum shape (with eight buttons) when printing is possible.

Context help and tool tip texts

A context help is available for help upon functions:

press F1 when the mouse cursor is on the window or the submenu function upon which you want help.

A tool tip text is visible after less than one second when you maintain the cursor on some button, label or text box...

The status bar

The status bar at the bottom of the main window displays a descriptive message for each functionality used.

Displaying and printing options

Most displaying and printing options, as well as the current user name and the default user name, are reached using "Other options" submenu. This one opens the following window:

Colors

To change a planet or an other element color, move the mouse cursor on the corresponding colored rectangle and click on it. Choose the new color in the window appearing then.

Fonts size

To change the charts fonts size, move the "Font size" slide.

Zodiac size

To change the zodiac size, move the "Zodiac size" slide

Signs size

To change the sign size, move the "Signs size" slide.

Other displaying or printing options:

Zodiac orientation:

Check the "Left Ascendant" submenu of the "Display" option to display zodiac with left ascendant.

(These charts privilege houses at the expense of signs).

(these charts privilege signs at the expense of houses).

Displaying signs name or not:

Check the "Name of signs" submenu of the "Display" option to make appear the name of signs next to their symbol in zodiac.

Displaying the first coordinate value of houses:

Check the "Coordinates of houses" submenu of the "Display" option to show houses coordinates, in zodiac. Uncheck it to show only Ascendant and Medium Colei coordinates.

Displaying only the first coordinate or the two ones for each planet:

Check the "First coordinate" submenu of the "Display" option to display only the first coordinate of the current coordinates system in the results window (for example the longitude for tropical coordinates).

Check the "Two coordinates" submenu of the "Display" option to display the two coordinates in the result window (for example the longitude and the declination for tropical coordinates).

Displaying a small font for planets coordinates in zodiac:

Check the "Little figures and names" submenu of the "Display" option to display numbers and names with a small font in zodiac, whichever is the "Font size" value in the "Other options" window.

Direct printing:

Check the "Direct" submenu of the "Printing" option.

Printing documents or charts after configuration:

Check the "after configuration" submenu of the "Printing" option.

Aspects choice

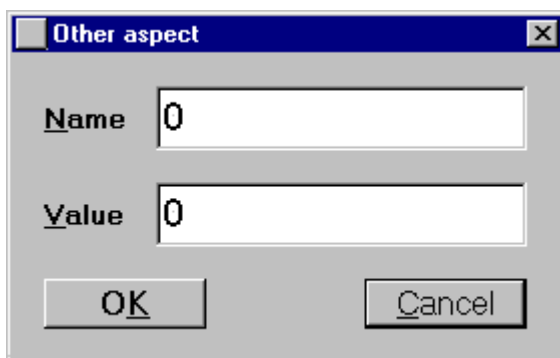

Check the "Aspects" submenu to show the following window:

The checked boxes give the aspects between planets types that will be taken in account in zodiac.

Check the box "Display aspects symbol" to show the aspects symbol in zodiac (for example "I" for the conjunction).

Click on the "Other aspect" button to show the following window:

The user can define the name and the value of a new aspect there no considered already in the list of aspects of the previous window.

Orbs definition by aspect type

Check the submenu "Orbs" to show the following window:

Maximum orbs of planets and sky points aspects (in degrees)
	Luminary	Individual	Jupiter Saturn	Collective	Major virtual	Minor virtual
Luminary	10	9	8	7	7	5
Individual		8	7	6	6	4
Jupiter Saturn			6	5	5	3
Collective				5	4	3
Major virtual					4	2
Minor virtual						1

Legend :		Dividing coefficients applied to the aspects		OK
Luminary	= Sun Moon	minor	2.5	squares	1.25
Individual	= Mercury Venus Mars	conjunction	1	trigon	1.15
Collective (et autres astres)	= Uranus Neptune Pluto Vulcan Asteroids	sextil	1.33	opposition	1.1
Major virtual	= Nodes L1h Ascendant Middle Sky
Minor virtual	= other virtual sky points				Cancel

In the orb section itself, each cell contains a value giving the orb of planets corresponding types shown in the legend.

So, a value of 10 in the cell crossing luminaries (Sun, Moon) and individual planets (Mercury, Venus and Mars) indicates that an aspect between for example the Moon and Venus will have an orb of 10° before the modification of its value by the divisor coefficient.

In the divisor section, a corrective coefficient is given to modify the previous orbs, according to the aspect types.

So, a value of 1.25 in the sextiles cells indicates that 1.25 divides the sextiles orb value, and therefore an initial 10° orb between for example the Moon and Venus will be reduced to $10^\circ / 1.25 = 8^\circ$, for a sextile between these two planets.

Coordinates system choice

The chart of an astrological or astronomical event can be established in seven distinct coordinate systems:

"Tropical geocentric coordinates" when "Geocentric" submenu "Tropical" option is checked.

"Sidereal geocentric coordinates" when "Geocentric" submenu "Sidereal" option is checked.

"Equatorial geocentric coordinates" when "Geocentric" submenu "Equatorial" option is checked..

"Ecliptic geocentric coordinates" when "Geocentric" submenu "Ecliptic" option is checked..

"Local geocentric coordinates" when "Geocentric" submenu "Local" option is checked..

"Normal heliocentric coordinates" when "Heliocentric" submenu "Normal" option is checked..

"Sidereal heliocentric coordinates" when "Heliocentric" submenu "Sidereal" option is checked.

House system choice

Charts calculated with non-local coordinates can show houses in one of the following systems:

- "Ancient houses" when "Ancient" option is checked.
- "2-hours houses" when option "2-hours" option is checked.
- "Semi-angular houses" when option "Semi-angular" option is checked.
- "Campanus houses" when option "Campanus" option is checked.
- "Equatorial regular houses" when "Equatorial regular" option is checked.
- "Colin Evans houses" when "Colin Evans" option is checked.
- "Bazchenoff houses" when "Bazchenoff" option is checked.
- "Maternus houses referred to Ascendant" when "Maternus/AS" option is checked.
- "Maternus houses referred to Medium Colei" when "Maternus/MC" option is checked.
- "Nodal houses" when "Nodal" option is checked.
- "Porphyre houses" when "Porphyre" option is checked.
- "Regiomontanus houses" when "Regiomontanus" option is checked.
- "Solar houses" when "Solar" option is checked.
- "Wiesel houses" when "Wiesel" option is checked.
- "Zenithal houses" when "Zenithal" option is checked.
- "Zodiacal houses" when "Zodiacal" option is checked.
- "Abenragel houses" when "Abenragel" option is checked.
- "Albatagnius houses" when "Albatagnius" option is checked.
- "Alcabitius houses" when "Alcabitius" option is checked.
- "Koch houses" when "Koch" option is checked.
- "Placidus houses" when "Placidus" option is checked.

Planets selection

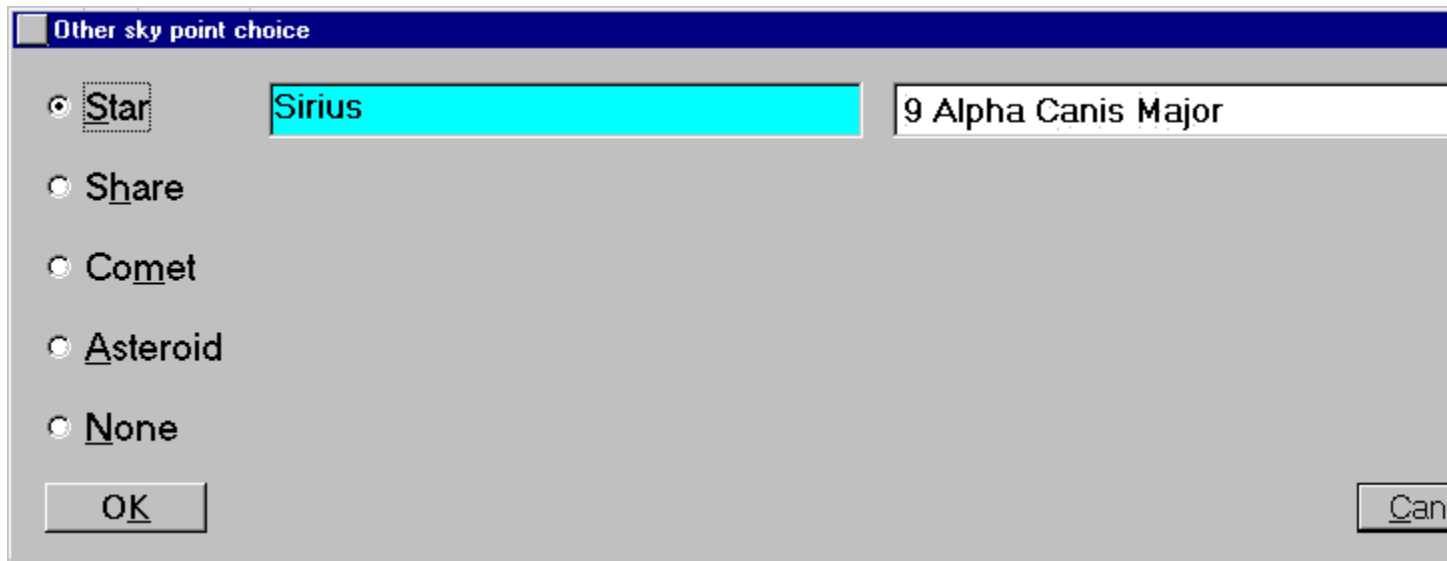

Check the "Planets and sky points" submenu to show the following window:

Only the checked Planets and sky points will be calculated and shown in charts.

Check "Ascendant" box to draw the aspects between ascendant and other planets or sky points. Check "Medium Colei" to draw the Medium Colei aspects.

Check "Other point" to select a star, a part, an asteroid or a comet on the chart. The following window then becomes visible:

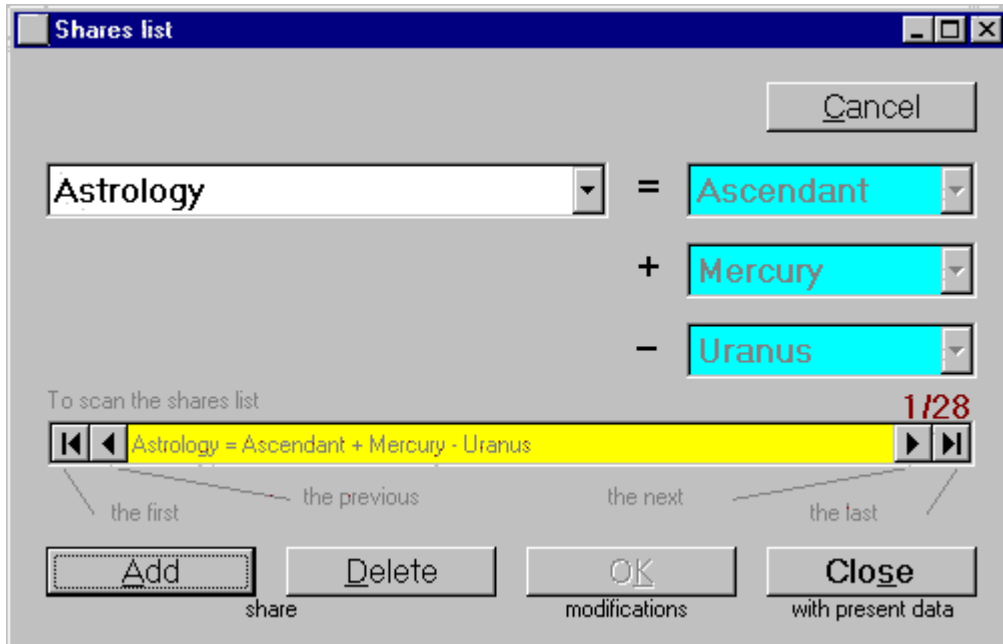

Then choose only one object among the following ones:
stars,

parts,
asteroids,
comets.

Parts name allocation

Check "Parts name" in the "Calculation" submenu of "Astrology" menu to show the following window:

Then add, modify or delete the parts name and corresponding definition.

Comment: clicking on "Names" button in the parts one can also show this window.

Maximum stars magnitude

Check the submenu "Stars" to show the following window:

Modify (or not) the magnitude value, knowing that the higher the value is, the more numerous the stars are (up to three thousand for magnitude 6) and the longer the calculation will be (some minutes for magnitude 6, but some seconds for magnitude less than 3).

Warning: all modified option in the options menu are automatically saved in the current user option list (user whose name can be seen in the "Other options" window). But to save the "Other options" modifications, the user must validate them.

Default user

The default user options are restored during each program loading. The first default user name, after the software setting up is "user".

If the current user is not the default one, he can:

either try to find his name in the "Other options" user list, (when his name is selected, his saved options are restored and replace the default user ones);

or add his name in the user list and define his own options. To do this, he must first click on "Add" button, then modify colors and sizes, and finally click on "OK". He can then modify other options in the "Options" menu.

When the current user name is selected from the list, he can then choose to become the default user by checking the default user box.

Remark: a given user can add as many names in the user list as various options configurations he wishes to save for his own use.

Options saving files

The options are saved into two file types, according to their nature:

The "Other options" (colors, sizes, user names) are saved into "Starlogin.mdb" file, in the format "Access 97", in the table "utilisateur".

The other ones are saved into files named "options_<user name>.opt" that can be read by any text editor, such as Windows "Notepad", but must follow a particular syntax.

Warning: -Modifying Starlogin.mdb file with Microsoft Access 97 or *.opt files with a text editor, is only advisable to experienced users.

-Before every modification of any of these files (and especially the Access file), do one or several back-up copies.

Astrological event basic knowledge

An astrological event represents every phenomenon that we can date and locate with sufficient precision to establish an "astrological chart", knowing that such a chart represents a sky view (or the spatial environment) from the event location.

The astrologer usually affirms that it exists a connection between the event (that can be the birth of a person as well as the beginning or the end of a war) and the state of the global and stellar environment to the same moment.

Scientifically, the only hypothesis or theories that seem to be able to justify the such connection existence, except for gravitational and electromagnetic forces the influence of which is generally judged negligible, are currently given by the occultism and esotericism. Indeed, in this domain of studies and knowledge, one considers the universe like a macrocosmic entity for which each part is interdependent of others and under a certain reciprocal influence, for the same reason as a human body is in relation to its organs and cells. From this point of view, it therefore inevitably exists links of influence and causality between an event and planets that surround him. And it is strong likely that the biggest entities and evolved (the planets) influence smallest very further that the opposite (men and the terrestrial phenomena to which they are confronted), even though one can observe cases where the conjugated influence of many small entities (viruses for example) can affect the biggest in a considerable manner (by the illness or the death, notably).

In the present scientific and esoteric knowledge state, one doesn't have any scientifically reliable, and even verifiable information, about the exact nature of influential astrological energies, their qualities and properties, and their interactions. To pretend to know the real influence of the Sun, the Moon and planets on the Earth and her humanity is humanly presumptuous. A honest astrologer can only admit the markedly empiric nature of his work.

However, an individual with a really open and scientific mind - in the sense where he doesn't reject anything as being false without having proven its deceptive, untrue or illusory nature - can note the relative capacity of the astrology only concerning psychological or medical diagnosis, so long as the astrologer is gifted of a basic level of intuition to palliate his lack of knowledge.

A great deal of study domains currently considered as sciences were born of the empiricism, and the inexpert state of the astrology, in spite of a past more that millennial, doesn't mean that it will not be one day intended to become in its turn a fully-fledged science, or even the Science of sciences since it would include the astronomy, the medicine, the psychology and many other domains, according to its universal study subject.

Initial database of events

The events are recorded in the "Starlogin.mdb" file, to the format "Access 97", in the table "event". The other data used in the software (such the orbital elements of asteroids and comets) are stocked in other tables that have explicit names.

Warning: -Modifying Starlogin.mdb file with Microsoft Access 97 is only advisable to experienced users.

-Before every modification of this file, do one ore more back-up copies.

At the time of the first Starlogin starting after its installation, the database is provided with a table of more than 300 events. Most between them concern the birth of more known individuals who often marked their epoch.

In order to protect from possible database manipulation mistakes that he could regret (either during the utilization of the software, either with Microsoft "Access 97"), the user is invited to do, if possible regularly, a back-up copy of the Starlogin.mdb file.

The events, existing or new, are accessible from the events window which is opened from "Events" submenu of "Main" menu or with the "Events" button. The window is the following one:

The screenshot shows the "Astrological event" dialog box. The window title is "Astrological event". On the left, there is a portrait of Adam Mickiewicz. The right side contains several input fields: "Surname:" MICKIEWICZ, "Other names:" Adam, "Entity type:" human, "Event:" Death, "Date:" 11/26/1855 (with radio buttons for "UT" and "local"), "Hour:" 20:45:00, "Place:" Constantinople (Turkey), "Latitude:" 41°02'00", and "Longitude:" -28°57'00". Below these are fields for "Sign:", "Ascendant:", and "Planetary configurations". A large text area for "Comments and description" is empty. At the bottom, there is a list of events with one entry selected: "Adam MICKIEWICZ - Death on 11/26/1855 at Constantinople (Turkey)". The list has navigation buttons (first, previous, next, last) and a page number "156/220". At the very bottom are buttons for "Cancel", "Add", "Delete", "OK", and "Close".

To add a new event

To add an event to the list, in the events window: click on the "add" button; choose the UT or local hour option; fill the empty fields with the right values and keep or modify the fields with a default value; then click on "OK".

Note: use the UT hour only for events of astronomical order or for events for which you have reliable information on the determination of the UT hour according to the legal hour, in the case of epochs where rules were usually complex or badly defined for the country of the event (as in France under the Occupation during World War 2nd).

Example: You want to add the following event to the database:

Marriage of Sam BROWN with Juliet WHITE, August 14, 1985 at 10h30, in New York. After having clicked on "add", select the local hour option, then write down:

"Sam BROWN and Juliet WHITE" in the field "Surname",

*"Marriage " in "event"

*"14/08/1985" in "date"

and "10:30:00" in the field "hour".

Let the field "Other names" empty. Let default values to the fields "place", "latitude" and "longitude", that is to say "New York (NY)", "40°40'00" and "73°50'00" respectively. Erase, fill or modify the other fields as wished. Finally, click on "OK" to effectively add this new event in the database.

At the time of the creation of a new event:

if the entered place and its coordinates are not already simultaneously in the places table of the database, they are automatically added to it, except if the first character of the complete place name is "_ " (underlining) or "~" (tilde).

if one or several fields remain empty, they are replaced by a string like "<name of the field> unknown 012457434".

Warning : the calculation of the (astrological or astronomical) star chart may give some bad positions for the astéroïds. If at least two astéroïdes among Ceres, Pallas, Vesta, Juno and Chiron may have exactly the same position (verify this by clicking on the "Display results" button to display more accurate résultats), calculate again the chart. Then, if at least both asteroids (the same ones or others) have the same position, start up again the application program.

To add or modify a picture

To add a picture about a selected given event, in the events window:

open "Photo Paint" or other graphic software;

with this software, open the wanted picture (find it in the appropriate directory);

select the picture and copy it in the clipboard;

close the graphic software;

click on the picture container field (in the upper left corner of the window);

in the "Insert Object" window that appears, select the option "Create New";

then select "Bitmap Picture" or an other graphic documents class ("Corel Photo Paint 6.0 picture", "Corel Draw 6.0 graphic", "Photo Editor 3.0 Photo", "Paint Shop Pro Picture" or an other class about a software installed on your computer);

when the selection is done and the "Insert Object" window is closed, a menu appears in the events' window;

click on the "Edit" menu then on the "Paste" submenu to paste the picture of the clipboard into the picture container of the events' window;

To modify an existing picture in the picture container:

open "Photo Paint" or an other graphic software;

with this software, open the wanted picture (find it in the appropriate directory);

select the picture and copy it in the clipboard;

close the graphic software;

click on the picture container with the right button of the mouse to make appear a contextual menu with "Modify" and "Open";

click on "Modify";

a menu appears in the events' window;

click on the "Edit" menu then on the "Paste" submenu to paste the picture of the clipboard into the picture container of the events' window;

to validate the picture, change the event (select the next or the previous one in the list, for example), then come back to the event where the picture has been modified.

To modify an event

To modify an event in the events window: search it in the event list or using the surname list for example; modify the content of one or several fields; then click on the "OK" button.

To delete an event

To delete an event in the event window: search it in the event list or using the surname list for example; click on the "Delete" button.

To select an event to use

To select an event in the event window, search it in the event list or using one of the following lists: surname, other names, event type, entity, or place. Then click on the "Close" button. The selected event data are then used in the astrological calculations and in some astronomical ones.

Using Access 97 to manage the database

A user knowing Microsoft® "Access 97" can read the totality of the Starlogin.mdb database used by Starlogin: to all tables including the one of events, to the included requests, and others.

He can, without danger for the database integrity in relation to Starlogin, do one or more of the following operations:

- to add, modify or suppress directly "Événement" (Event) table records,
- to add records in tables "Astéroïdes" (Asteroids), "Comètes" (Comets), "Étoiles" (Stars), "Parts" and "Lieux" (Places).
- to add any requests, forms and statements.

But he risks of having the most serious problems, if he modifies in any manner one of the other tables or one of the well-stocked requests.

The table "Événement" shows the field "Photo ou tableau" (Photo or picture) that you can fill or view in the "Événement" form.

Astrology and Astronomy.

Saving and reading a sky chart

Most of astrological and astronomical sky charts can be saved for future reading. To save one, click on the icon  in the window of the chart and record the corresponding file under a sufficiently explicit name to know what chart it is about (for example "John 2x Saturn Revolution.doz" for the chart of the second return of Saturn after John birth). To read a saved chart, click on "Read a chart" in "Main" menu and select the required .doz file in its folder.

Filters and statistics

Some statistics about events and their sorting according to certain criteria can be obtained in the corresponding window after click on "Filters and statistics" in the "Main" menu:

number of like birth events, distinct of a birth, or any sorted by signs, ascendants, months, years, places, types of entity or configurations;

filters (cumulative or not) of events searching on fields of the window event:

- surname,
- other names,
- entity type,
- event date,
- event hour,
- event name,
- event latitude,
- event longitude,
- description,
- sign,
- ascendant,
- configuration.

You can search for the characterized events for example by:

sign = "Aries"

event = "Birth (hour?)"

entity type = "human"

proceeding as follows: first select the "new filter" option, the "sign" field, and write "Aries" into "Search filter in the field"; then selects the "add criterion" option, the "event" field, and write "Birth (hour?)" into "Search filter..."; then select the "entity type" field and write "human"; and finally click on the "OK" button to see the results in the grid.

Warning: lower and upper cases are distinct for these researches, also to search events for "human" entity type will give a different result that for a research for "Human" one.

Most sky charts and the corresponding calculation results can be printed by clicking on the icon  in the concerned windows or from "Print" in the "Main" menu.

Astrology and Astronomy.

Hourly astrology

The hourly astrology establishes the sky chart of an astrological event either passed or future to answer to a question concerning this event. For a relating question to a future supposed or likely event, you can establish the chart for its considered moment or can establish the chart of the moment where the question is asked.

Definition of the question to ask

Limit oneself to only one precise and lucid question (that must not be formulate for fun or by simple curiosity).

This one must contain an idea of effect, repercussion or consequence.

It must have a subject and an object obviously joined or not, such as:

known subject - unknown object

Example: what was the purpose (object) of such meeting (subject)?

unknown subject - known object

Example: what type of government (object) will be instituted in such country (subject)?

known subject and object with link not yet known

Example: must the consultant (subject) be married (object)?

known subject and object whose one wants to know circumstances

Example: will the consultant's wife (subject) live well the birth of her child (object)?

known subject and object whose one wants to know reasons

Example: why did this individual (subject) resign (object)?

Event chart calculation

When the event is defined and recorded (provisionally or not) in the database (see. Database and files), calculate it chart in the usual way (see. Menu and submenus and Tittle bar buttons).

Previous exam of the chart

A first analysis permits to either keep or dismiss the question if need be:

If the ascendant is in the first three degrees of its sign, the posed problem is not yet mature and it will be necessary to wait for at least the next lunar month before rephrasing it.

If it is in the last three degrees of its sign the event arrives to its conclusion and nothing else can modify it.

If the 7th or the 9th house ruler is retrograde, or when these houses contain retrograde planets or the Scorpio sign, astrologers usually consider the interpretation as unachievable.

If the Descendant lunar Node is in the first house, astrologers consider that the consultant has a shameful or non-respectable hidden goal.

If the Moon is at the end of a sign and doesn't form any aspect with any planet, one can consider that the problem will be resolved only if the horoscope is positive, or that it is blocked by the hidden influences otherwise.

If the same planet is the ruler of the sign on the cusp of the first house and of the sign on the cusp of the one of the question, one must take the Moon and not the Ascendant to represent the consultant.

Main rules of interpretation

Favorable nature of the answer to the question

when the consultant's significant planets and those of the posed question are in angular houses (1st, 4th, 7th, and 10th), when they form some harmonious aspects between them (sextile or trine, mainly), or when they are in mutual reception (one of planets is in the sign ruled by the other, and reciprocally).

Unfavorable nature of the answer to the question

when significant planets form the dynamic aspects or tension (square or opposition), when the ruler of the 8th house is the same as the one of the house relating to the question, when significant planets have the tendency to move away one from the other because of their relative displacement (final disagreement indication between two parts), when one of significant planets becomes retrograde before a conjunction (indication of resistance or back-pedal), when significant planets are in conjunction but in different signs, when significant planets are in square or opposition of either the Moon or the part of Fortune, when the Part of Fortune is in square or opposition of the Moon, Mars or Saturn, when the nearest planet of the Middle of the Sky is in "fall"...

Ambiguous nature of the answer to the question

when it exists many indications of unfavorable nature as well as favorable nature. One can then consider the situation as ambiguous, confused or inextricable.

Dating events (indicative but not systematic rules)

Fixed signs (Taurus, Leo, Scorpio and Aquarius)

in angular houses (1st, 4th, 7th and 10th): periods in months in succedent houses (3rd, 6th, 9th and 12th): periods in years in cadent houses (2nd, 5th, 8th and 11th): periods in long cycles

Mutable signs (Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius and Pisces)

in angular houses: periods in weeks in succedent houses: periods in months

in cadent houses: periods in years

Cardinal signs (Aries, Cancer, Libra and Capricorn)

in angular houses: periods in days

in succedent houses: periods in weeks

in cadent houses: periods in months

Planet situated in beginning of house: action in beginning of the consultant or the concerned entity life,

Planet in conjunction with the ascendant: action lasting all the length of the event,

Planet in middle of house: action in middle of life,

Planet in end of house: action in end of life.

When two signs occupy the same house, one can consider that the first especially acts during the first half of life or event, and the second during the other half.

The usable house systems

Sky charts established in non-local coordinates can represent the astrological houses using different system. Following one are usable for all places of the terrestrial surface, except few ones:

- "Ancient houses".
- "2-hours houses".
- "Semi-angular houses".
- "Campanus houses".
- "Equatorial regular houses".
- "Colin Evans houses".
- "Bazchenoff houses".
- "Maternus houses referred to Ascendant".
- "Maternus houses referred to Medium Colei".
- "Nodal houses".
- "Porphyre houses".
- "Regiomontanus houses".
- "Solar houses".
- "Wiesel houses".
- "Zenithal houses".
- "Zodiacal houses".

But the following five ones cannot be calculated in the Polar Regions (beyond polar circle):

- "Abenragel houses".
- "Albategnius houses".
- "Alcabitius houses".
- "Koch houses".
- "Placidus houses".

The simultaneously simplest house systems in their conception and most legitimate are probably those of Campanus, Maternus, and Porphyre.

The usable coordinates systems

Sky chart of an astrological or astronomical event can be established in seven distinct coordinate systems that are:

"Tropical geocentric coordinates. It is about the system of coordinates the most fluently used by astrologers and in the astrological tear-off calendars.

"Sidereal geocentric coordinates".

"Equatorial geocentric coordinates".

"Ecliptic geocentric coordinates".

"Local geocentric coordinates".

"Normal heliocentric coordinates".

"Sidereal heliocentric coordinates".

Primary directions

The primary directions of an astrological event are calculated from "Primary directions" submenu of "Forecasting" one in the "Calculate" submenu of "Astrology" menu, or by clicking on the "Directions" button of the title bar and then on "Primary" in the appearing window, or even by pressing "Ctrl+F1" keys.

In the window where will be calculated the primary direction chart, keyboard the age (or the duration) that will be necessary to the calculation, before validating. This age is the number of years considered in progress after the date of the current event. It can be written under decimal form, that is in years and fractions of year.

Example: the primary directions of the natal chart of an individual when he is 36 years and 5 months old will be calculated by entering $36+5/12 = 36.41666666...$

Use the Calculator if need be to calculate the wished decimal age precisely.

Secondary directions

The secondary directions of an astrological event are calculated from "Secondary directions" submenu of "Forecasting" one in the "Calculate" submenu of "Astrology" menu, or by clicking on the "Directions" button of the title bar and then on "Secondary" in the appearing window, or even by pressing "Ctrl+F2" keys.

In the window where will be calculated the secondary direction chart, keyboard the age (or the duration) that will be necessary to the calculation, before validating. This age is the number of years considered in progress after the date of the current event.

Symbolic directions

The symbolic directions of an astrological event are calculated from "Symbolic directions" submenu of "Forecasting" one in the "Calculate" submenu of "Astrology" menu, or by clicking on the "Directions" button of the title bar and then on "Symbolic" in the appearing window, or even by pressing "Ctrl+F3" keys.

In the window where will be calculated the symbolic direction chart, keyboard the age (or the duration) that will be necessary to the calculation, before validating. This age is the number of years considered in progress after the date of the current event.

Planets revolutions

The planetary revolutions or cyclic return of an astrological event are calculated from "Revolutions" submenu of "Forecasting" one in the "Calculate" submenu of "Astrology" menu, or by clicking on the "Revolutions" button of the title bar and then on "Revolutions" in the appearing window, or even by pressing "Ctrl+R" keys.

One or the other of these operations shows the window to select the planet or the sky point whose you wish to do the revolution. Select the wanted star, enter the number of returns to calculate, indicate the name and coordinates of the place where were (or where should be), at the time of the considered revolution, the entity concerned by the event, then validate.

Remark:

If the place is unknown, let the proposed default place (New York) or keyboard for example "NO" for the name and "0°00'00"" for each coordinate In this case, the ascendant and the other houses cusps will remain without significance.

It can happen that some numbers or decimal numbers of returns are not calculable for certain stars or sky points, because of an inserted retrogradation that would forbid the calculations convergence. Slightly modify then the number and calculate again (in this case, the found revolution date will be of course not precisely the same as the one initially wished).

It is possible to keyboard a decimal number of revolutions to calculate the half, third, and quarters of revolutions notably.

Example: to calculate the sky chart corresponding to a Saturn revolution and half after the event, enter 1.5 cycles, select Saturn, then validate.

Planets cycles

The planetary The cycles of an astrological event are calculated from "Cycles" submenu of "Forecasting" one in the "Calculate" submenu of "Astrology" menu, or by clicking on the "Revolutions" button of the title bar and then on "real Cycles" in the appearing window, or even by pressing "Ctrl+Y" keys.

One or the other of these operations shows the window to select the couple of planets or sky points whose you wish to do a cycle. Select the two planets wanted, enter the number of cycles to calculate, indicate the name and coordinates of the place where were (or where should be), at the time of the considered cycle, the entity concerned by the event, then validate.

Remark:

If the place is unknown, let the proposed default place (New York) or keyboard for example "NO" for the name and "0°00'00"" for each coordinate In this case, the ascendant and the other houses cusps will remain without significance.

It can happen that some numbers or decimal numbers of cycles are not calculable for certain stars or sky points, because of an inserted retrogradation that would forbid the calculations convergence. Permute then the two stars or slightly modify the number of cycles and calculate again (in this case, the found cycle date will be of course not precisely the same as the one initially wished).

It is possible to keyboard a decimal number of cycles to calculate the half, third, and quarters of cycles notably.

Example: to calculate the sky chart corresponding to two cycles and quarter of Jupiter-Saturn after the event, enter 2.25 cycles, select Jupiter on the left and Saturn on the right, then validate. If the calculation is impossible because of non-convergence, select Saturn on the left and Jupiter on the right, then calculate again. If the calculation is always impossible, slightly modify the number of cycles...

Transits

The transits of an astrological event are calculated from "Transits" submenu of "Forecasting" one in the "Calculate" submenu of "Astrology" menu, or by clicking on the "Transits" button of the title bar, or even by pressing "Ctrl+T" keys.

In the window where will be calculated the transit chart, enter the transits date before validation.

Two charts comparison

The comparison of two astrological events is calculated from "Comparison" submenu of "Comparisons" one in the "Calculate" submenu of "Astrology" menu or by clicking on the "compariSons" button of the title bar and then on "compariSon" in the appearing window, or even by pressing "Ctrl+S" keys.

In the window where will be calculated the comparison chart, validate to be able to define the event the sky chart of which should be compared to the one of the current event. In the event window, select the second event before to close.

Note: planets of the initial event are displayed on the outside circle of the comparison chart, and the second ones are on the interior circle.

Several charts combination

The combination of several astrological events is calculated from "Combination" submenu of "Comparisons" one in the "Calculate" submenu of "Astrology" menu or by clicking on the "compariSons" button of the title bar and then on "Combination" in the appearing window, or even by pressing "Ctrl+C" keys.

In the window where will be calculated the combination chart, enter the number of charts that will be combined before to validate, to be able to define the other events than the current one. In the event window, select the next event, then close. If the charts number is greater than 2, the event window is still shown as many times as necessary to select the next events.

Planet chart barycenter

The planets' barycenter of an astrological event chart is calculated from "Barycenter" submenu of "Calculate" one in the "Astrology" menu.

In the window where is calculated the barycenter, you can choose the calculation type:
either barycenter for planets having the same "weight", or barycenter for the Sun, the Moon, Mercury, Venus, etc having decreasing weights, so that the barycenter will be statistically more often near the Sun or the Moon than near Pluto or Saturn, for example.

Aspect list

The aspects list of an astrological event chart is obtained from "Aspects" submenu of "Calculate" one in the "Astrology" menu or by clicking on the "Aspects value" button of the considered calculated chart.

Midpoints

The midpoints list of an astrological event chart is obtained from "Midpoints" submenu of "Calculate" one in the "Astrology" menu or by clicking on the "Midpoints" button of the considered calculated chart.

Parts

The parts lists of an astrological event chart are obtained from "Parts" submenu of "Calculate" one in the "Astrology" menu or by clicking on the "Parts" button of the considered calculated chart when it is visible.

In the parts window, select the reference planet or the sky point and then validate to obtain the parts calculated with this reference.

Example: to obtain the parts with Ascendant as reference (that is Ascendant + planet1 - planet2 parts) such as the part of Fortune (equal to Ascendant + Moon - Sun), select the Ascendant as reference planet or sky point, then validate.

The parts name list can be obtain by clicking on the "Names" button in the parts window.

Note: parts are written with their coordinate calculated from Aries 0°. So, for example, a part having the value $137^{\circ}39'$ would be at $17^{\circ}39'$ of the Leo sign, because 120° (to obtain the Leo 0° : 30° for Aries + 30° for Taurus + 30° for Gemini + 30° for Cancer) + $17^{\circ}39' = 137^{\circ}39'$.

Find the event date and place of a tropical chart

When you don't know the references of an event whose you possess an astrological chart in tropical coordinates, because the author of the book or the article where you found this chart didn't mention them, you can attempt to recover them by clicking on the "Date and place of a chart" submenu of "Calculate" one in the "Astrology" menu, or by pressing "Ctrl+D" keys.

When you only know the partial references of an astrological event, as the birth of an individual whose you only know the date or the year, but nor the place nor the hour for example, and when you know at least the position of his sign (the position of the Sun), or of a fast planet as the Moon or Venus, and of an another one of his planets (if possible a slow planet as Saturn), you can attempt to recover them in the same way.

In the appearing window, select a first planet (The Moon for example, the fastest planet) and enter:

either its sign and the number of degrees in the sign (for example "Libra" and "10°22'"), either only its coordinate from the zero degree of the Aries (that is $10^{\circ}22' + 180^{\circ} = "190^{\circ}2'"$ in the above example).

The coordinate is written in the longitude field, and the sign is selected in the sign list.

Select then a second planet (if possible a slow one), with either its sign and its degree in the sign, either only its coordinate the zero degree of the Aries.

Possibly select then a third planet, etc.

If the positions of the Ascendant and/or of Medium Colei are known, keyboard them also. They will allow to find the hour and the place coordinates of the event.

In case of error while keyboarding the value of a coordinate or selecting a sign for a planet, click on the planet concerned by this error, then on the "Erase the line" button.

If the year, the month, the day and/or the hour of the event are known, keyboard them in the corresponding fields.

Finally, write the initial and the final date of the search interval, then validate. Example: if you think that the event took place during the nineteenth century, enter the dates "1/1/1801" and "31/12/1900".

Remark: one century starts in the year 1 of the century, and not in the year 0!
Thus, the twenty-first century will only begin in January the first, 2001 at 0 o'clock in the morning, and not in January the first, 2000!

Asteroids position

The position of an asteroid is calculated from "Asteroids" submenu of "Astronomy" menu.

In the asteroids window, select the wanted asteroid name, enter the date, the hour, the observation place name and coordinates, then click on "Calculate" to obtain the asteroid position, in the current coordinates system (see. Coordinates system choice).

It is possible to add an asteroid into the list, to remove one from it, or even to modify the relating data to an asteroid. To do this, proceed as for events (See Database and files).

Star chart

A star chart observed from a given place at a given date can be calculated from submenu "Star chart" of menu "Astronomy".

In the corresponding window, you can select the direction toward which the observer looks at the sky:

Click on "Horizon" to see the sky above the horizon.

Click on "Zenith" to see the sky towards Zenith.

You also can:

display the coordinates of the planets by checking the "Coordinates" checkbox;

display the constellations by checking the "Constellations" checkbox;

display the values of planets' coordinates by clicking on the "Results" button;

display the hours of rise and set of planets by clicking on the "Rise and Set" button;

calculate the distances and the apparent angles between the planets by clicking on the "Distances between planets" button.

Comets position

The position of a periodical comet is calculated from "Comets" submenu of "Astronomy" menu.

In the comets window, select the wanted comet name, enter the initial observation date and hour, the final date and hour, the observation place name and coordinates, then click on "Calculate" to obtain the successive comet positions for the observation duration, in the current coordinates system (see. Coordinates system choice).

It is possible to add a comet into the list, to remove one from it, or even to modify the relating data to a comet. To do this, proceed as for events (See Database and files).

Stars position

Stars position for the date of the current astrological event is calculated from "Stars" submenu of "Astronomy" menu.

The calculation is done for the current coordinates system (see. Coordinates system choice), and for the current event place. All the stars whose visual or photovisual magnitude (the difference between the two magnitude types is negligible) is less than the current limit magnitude (see. Maximum stars magnitude) are taken in account for the displayed results.

Planets aphelion and perihelion crossing dates

A planet perihelion and aphelion crossing dates are calculated from "Perihelion and aphelion" submenu of "Astronomy" menu.

In the corresponding window, enter the supposed close year to the searched dates and select the wanted planet for calculation, before validating.

Planets orbital nodes crossing dates

A planet' ascending node and descending one dates are calculated from "Crossing nodes" submenu of "Astronomy" menu.

In the corresponding window, enter the supposed close year to the searched dates and select the wanted planet for calculation, before validating.

Moon phases and ages

The phase and the age of the Moon at a given date are calculated from "Moon phases and ages" submenu of "Astronomy" menu.

In the corresponding window, enter the date and the hour of the moment for which you want to know the phase and the lunar age, before validating.

Lunar and solar eclipses

The solar and lunar eclipses during a considered year are calculated from "Eclipses" submenu of "Astronomy" menu.

In the corresponding window, enter the year for which you want to know the solar and lunar eclipses dates, before validating.

Validating allows to obtain the first eclipse date in the considered year. To obtain the next year, click on the "Next" button. Etc until the "Next" button becomes "END".

Solstices and equinoxes dates

The dates of each solstice and equinox (or seasons in other words) during a considered year are calculated from "Solstices and equinoxes" submenu of "Astronomy" menu.

In the corresponding window, enter the year for which you want to know the seasons, before validating.

Planets rise and set hours

The rise, set and crossing meridian hours of a given planet and the corresponding positions are calculated from "Planet rise and set" submenu of "Astronomy" menu or by clicking on the "Rise and set" button in a sky chart window, when this button is visible.

In the corresponding window, select the planet for which you want to know the hours and positions of rise, set and crossing meridian, before validating.

Apparent angle and distance between two planets

Apparent angle and distance between two planets are respectively calculated from "Angle between two planets" submenu of "Space" menu and from the "Distance between two planets" one, or both simultaneously by clicking on "Distance between 2 planets" button in a sky chart window, when this button is visible.

In the corresponding window, select the two planets the angle and/or the distance of which you want to know, before validating.

Distance between two earth places

The angular and kilometric distances between two earth places are calculated from "Distance between two places" submenu of "Space" menu.

In the corresponding window, enter the coordinates (latitude and longitude) for each place the distance between which you want to know, before validating.

Alignments and angles between three earth places

The alignment and the angles between three earth places are respectively calculated from "Alignment between three places" submenu of "Space" menu and from "Angles between three places" one.

In the corresponding window, enter the coordinates (latitude and longitude) for each place, before validating.

Greenwich sidereal time at midnight calculation

The Greenwich Sidereal Time at midnight (0h TU) is calculated from "Greenwich time" submenu of "Time" menu.

In the corresponding window, enter the date for which you want to know the Greenwich Sidereal Time at midnight, before validating.

Find the week day name of a date

The week day name of a given date is calculated from "Week day" submenu of "Time" menu.

In the corresponding window, enter the date the weekday name of which you want to know, before validating.

Find Easter date

The (catholic) Easter date for a given year is calculated from "Easter date" submenu of "Time" menu.

In the corresponding window, enter the year the Easter date of which you want to know, before validating.

Julian days and Gregorian dates

The conversion between a Gregorian calendar date and the corresponding Julian day is done from "Julian days" submenu of "Time" menu.

In the corresponding window, either enter the Julian day before pressing the "Enter" or "Carriage return" key to calculate the equivalent Gregorian date, or enter the Gregorian day before pressing the "Enter" or "Carriage return" key to calculate the equivalent Julian day.

Different calendars

The conversion between eighteen different calendars is done from "Calendars" submenu of "Time" menu.

In the corresponding window, select the initial calendar and enter the date expressed with this one, before validating, to know the equivalent other calendars date.

Universal and local sidereal times

The conversion between an universal time hour and the equivalent local sidereal time hour is done from "Time" submenu of "Time" menu.

In the corresponding window, enter the considered date and the earth location, then:
either enter the UT hour before pressing the "Enter" or "Carriage return" key to calculate the equivalent local sidereal time hour, or enter the local sidereal time hour before pressing the "Enter" or "Carriage return" key to calculate the equivalent UT hour.

Astronomical and geographical latitudes

The conversion between the astronomical latitude of a considered earth location and the geographical one is done from "Latitudes" submenu of "Space" menu.

In the corresponding window, enter the altitude of the earth location, then:
either enter the astronomical latitude before pressing the "Enter" or "Carriage return" key to calculate the equivalent geographical one, or enter the geographical latitude before pressing the "Enter" or "Carriage return" key to calculate the equivalent astronomical one.

Decimal and sexagesimal degrees

The conversion between a number of degrees in decimal form and the same in sexagesimal form is done from "degrees" submenu of "Space" menu.

In the corresponding window,

either enter the number of decimal degrees before pressing the "Enter" or "Carriage return" key to calculate the equivalent number of sexagesimal degrees, or enter the number of sexagesimal degrees before pressing the "Enter" or "Carriage return" key to calculate the equivalent number of decimal degrees.

Astrology and Astronomy.

Aspects between two planets

The meaning of an aspect between two planets is usually found by combining their signification, in a positive manner when the aspect is harmonic (sextile or trine), in a more neutral manner in case of conjunction or of rather neutral minor aspect, or in a rather negative manner in case of a dynamic aspect. But sometimes, according to the general ambiance of a horoscope, a harmonic aspect can be interpreted negatively, or a dynamic aspect can be interpreted positively. It above all depends on intuitive or psychological perceptions, because the astrology being an exact science is still a long way off.

In what follows, are given some examples of planetary aspect interpretation.

Aspects with the Sun

In general, a planet forming an aspect with the Sun is positively or negatively amplified according to the nature of the aspect. In addition, one can notice for example for the following aspects:

The event chart

A sky chart represents a snapshot of the apparent stars movement at the date for which it is established (that is the date of the astrological event that it tempts to describe, or the astronomical observation date).

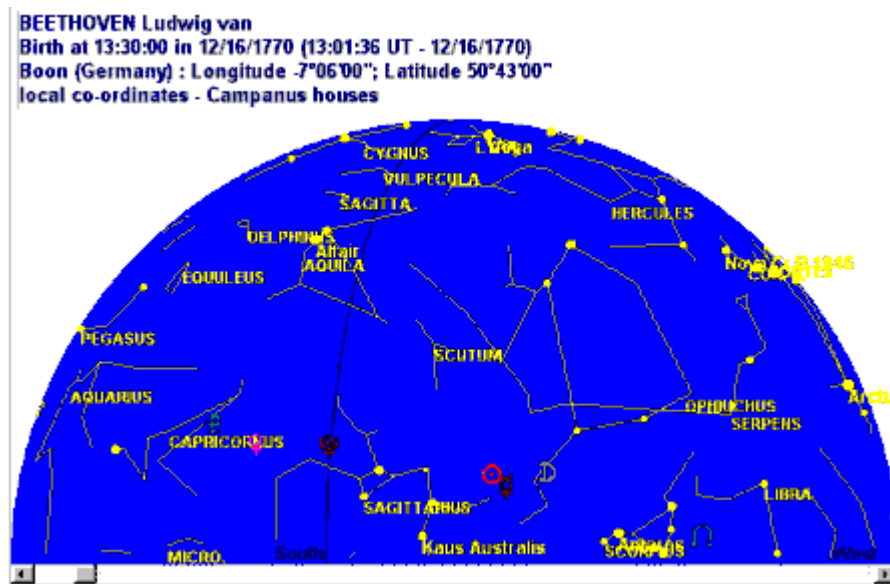

In non-local coordinates (used by the astrology), it comes in the form of:

Planets and houses appear there outside the zodiac.

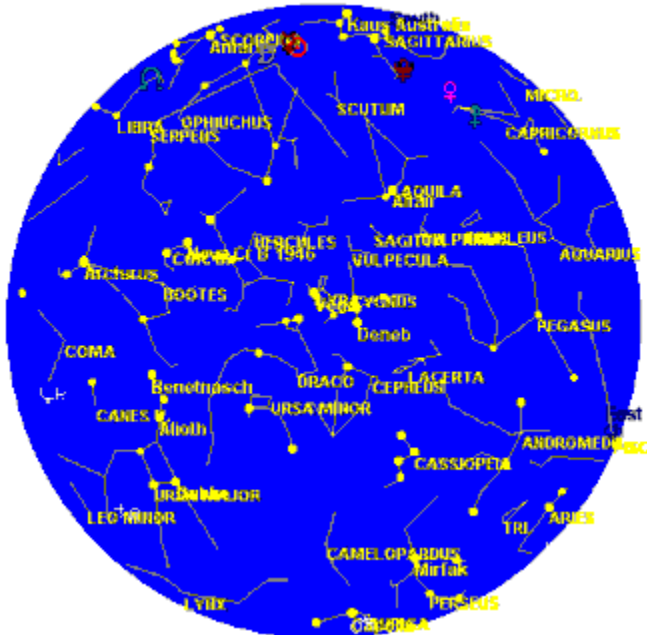

In local coordinates (used by the astronomy), it is proposed under the two following orientations:

for a observer looking toward the horizon:

for a observer looking toward the Zenith:

BEETHOVEN Ludwig van

☐ quadri-nonagon (160°) Neutral ...

A other aspect (value depending of the user choice, for example the vigintile (18°) or the tridectile (108°))

Relative aspects

The relative aspects are calculated according to the following relation:
relative aspect between 2 planets = angular distance between these planets \times Sun-ascending distance / 180°.

Midpoints

The midpoint between two planets is a virtual sky point in the averaged position of the two planets. One can see it as the result of these two planets energy combination. One then interprets it like a virtual planet that would have the resulting symbolism of this combination. At the present time, it is far from being proved that midpoints possess any reality at the astrological influence level.

Parts

A part is a virtual sky point calculated from the position of three planets or sky points, according to the formula:

Part = Reference planet position + planet 1 position - planet 2 position.

If at least some parts including the one of fortune can have some real influence, it seems that one doesn't know the real reason for that.

Transits

Primary directions

The primary directions represent the most complex predictive technique and the one that requires the maximum of chart hour precision. Indeed, because of the earth rotation angular velocity, the ascendant position increases by one degree in only four minutes, and because of planets revolution period around the Sun (in geocentric coordinates) or of apparent revolution around the Earth (in heliocentric coordinates), a little time may be sufficient - less than two hours for the Moon - to see these planets moving by one degree in the zodiac. Consequently, since this method puts the "1 degree = 1 year" equivalence, a 10 minutes error on the event chart date produces the following average errors on the primary directions:

two years and a half on the Ascendant or the Medium Colei directions (because $10/4 * 1 \text{ year} = 2.5 \text{ years}$), a moth on the Moon directions (because $10\text{mn} * 360^\circ / (29.53\text{days} * 24\text{h/day} * 60\text{mn/h}) = 0.0847 \text{ year} = 31 \text{ days}$)

a week on Mercury directions (because $10\text{mn} * 360^\circ / (116\text{days} * 24\text{h/day} * 60\text{mn/h}) = 0.0215 \text{ year} = 7.8 \text{ days}$)

a day and half on Venus directions

a day on Mars directions

five hours on Jupiter directions

two hours on Saturn directions

forty minutes on Uranus directions

twenty minutes on Neptune directions

fifteen minutes on Pluto directions

six or seven hours on Lilith directions...

This method is little experimented and its reliability and foundations are not yet demonstrated.

The primary direction chart calculated from a given event reference chart (as the one of an individual birth - called the individual "horoscope") is above all interpreted in comparison with the reference one.

Secondary directions

The secondary directions, even if they are more use and easy than the primary ones, seem to be without much foundation and not very predictive.

The secondary direction chart calculated from a given event reference chart (as the one of an individual birth - called the individual "horoscope") is above all interpreted in comparison with the reference one.

Symbolic directions

The symbolic directions, even if they are more use and easy than the primary ones, seem to be without much foundation and not very predictive.

The symbolic direction chart calculated from a given event reference chart (as the one of an individual birth - called the individual "horoscope") is above all interpreted in comparison with the reference one.

Planets revolutions

The planetary revolutions are more used by the astrologers than the directions, especially the solar revolution, and seem to give good enough predictive results, even though a scientific or esoteric foundation remains to find.

A planetary revolution chart calculated from a given event reference chart (as the one of an individual birth - called the individual "horoscope") is above all interpreted in comparison with the reference one.

Planets cycles

The planetary cycles are still little used by astrologers, but already give good results in historic astrology and will perhaps find an esoteric theoretical foundation during the next decades, at least under the modified form that are the Symbolic planets cycles.

A planetary cycle chart calculated from a given event reference chart (as the one of an individual birth - called the individual "horoscope") is above all interpreted in comparison with the reference one.

Transits

The planet transit on a chart planet or point represents, in the strict sense of the word, its conjunction (that is the same longitude or main coordinate) with the planet or point.

In the broad sense, astrology also considers the planet transits in square, in trine or in opposition position, or even any other aspect made with a chart planet or point. Thus, one can, for example, observe the moments when Saturn crosses the individual radical Sun, or when it is in sextile, or in square... of Sun (or of any other chart planet or point)...

If some transits can have a real influence on a person, the objective and detailed observation of all the planetary transits, in correspondence with the objective and subjective events of the person life, shows that all of them are far to be significant. The real explanation of these facts is, for the time being, neither scientifically, nor astrologically found.

Nonetheless, there's no harm in suggesting a particular symbolic interpretation for the triple transit of a planet on a chart planet or point during its retrogradation (see Planets retrogradation):

During its retrogradation, a planet crosses three times a given chart point. A first time with a direct motion, then a second one when it seemingly turns back, and finally a third one when it goes forward again.

Symbolically, one considers that during the first transit, the individual encounters a problem or a critical situation comparable to a closed door, according to the planet symbolism and to its position in comparison with the natal chart. During the second one, he finds the key enabling him to resolve the situation. Then during the third phase, he can free himself from the problem by opening the door and getting over it.

The transit chart calculated from a given event reference chart (as the one of an individual birth - called the individual "horoscope") for a particular date is above all interpreted in comparison with the reference one.

Planets retrogradation

During their apparent revolution around the Earth, the planets that actually turn around the Sun in the "direct" direction seem to have sometimes a backward movement (once a year since the Earth turns around the Sun in one year):

(apparent movement of an external planet)

This movement is called "retrogradation".

Thus,

- Mercury shows a 14° more or less 5° retrogradation, 72 days per year
- Venus shows a 16° more or less 5° retrogradation, 26 days per year
- Mars shows a 16° more or less 5° retrogradation, 34 days per year
- Jupiter shows a 10° more or less $5'$ retrogradation, 111 days per year
- Saturn shows a $6^\circ 47'$ retrogradation, 132 days per year
- Uranus shows a $4^\circ 02'$ retrogradation, 150 days per year
- Neptune shows a $2^\circ 48'$ retrogradation, 157 days per year
- Pluto shows a $2^\circ 15'$ more or less $40'$ retrogradation, 162 days per year
- (Chiron, shows a $5^\circ 15'$ more or less 2° retrogradation, 142 days per year).

In a chart with geocentric coordinates, the chance of having retrograding planets (among Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune and Pluto) is given below:

- 1 in 15 chance of having no retrograding planet.
- 1 in 5 chance of having only one retrograding planet.
- 3 in 10 chance of having two retrograding planets.
- 1 in 4 chance of having three retrograding planets.
- 1 in 8 chance of having four retrograding planets.
- 1 in 25 chance of having five retrograding planets.
- 1 in 120 chance of having six retrograding planets.
- 1 in 1000 chance of having seven retrograding planets.
- 1 in 20000 chance of having the eight retrograding planets.

Therefore, sky charts having only two retrograding planets are the more frequent, and those having the eight are the more rare (since one must establish 20,000 charts, on average, to have a chance of seeing one of them with all retrograding planets)!

One must note that the Moon being not a planet but a natural satellite of the Earth, and directly turning around her but not around the Sun, is not affected by the retrogradation phenomenon.

Charts combination and comparison

The combination of several sky charts, seems to be a way of having an enough synthetic idea of the event charts interaction. Thus, this technique is particularly recommended to astrologically study a couple, a family, a small association or enterprise, or a small group of friends.

The combination chart is interpreted as an individual one, but keeping in mind that one deals with separated entities.

The comparison of two sky charts, seems to be enough reliable to compare two events such as the birth of two individuals.

The comparison uses the same interpretation techniques as those of an individual chart (planets in sign and in house, house in sign, and aspects...), except that one deals with the planets of a chart in comparison with the houses or the signs of the other one, and with aspects between the first chart planets and the second one planets...

Spirit, Soul and Personality

Subtle bodies of human

Chakras

Spirit, Soul and Personality

Spirit, soul and personality are the three aspects of an entity during its manifestation in the Shape in the course of reincarnation process. This one is roughly comparable to fishing. The "Monad" or "Spirit" is a fisherman that experiences several waters to get information and experience from them, and to increase his awareness in this way. The fishing rod is the soul that gives and conveys the awareness. The fishhook is the personality that takes information, lives experiences, sometimes becomes bogged down in the silt... Every time the fisher changes fishhook to plunge it into new fishing conditions, it corresponds to a new life, lived by a new personality. Becoming progressively more clever, perfecting his fishhook, he tends up becoming an ace of this activity, learning nothing more from it, and retiring! The Monad definitely withdraws from the physical plan and the reincarnation process stops when it becomes self-aware and when the soul has no more reason to exist.

Subtle bodies of human

In addition to his dense physical body made of flesh, bone and blood, the man possesses subtler bodies, vehicles of particular aspects of his complex being:

the etheric body is his vitality vehicle;

the astral body is his emotions and sensations vehicle;

the mental body is his concrete ideas and mental vehicle;

the causal body is his vehicle of his soul in incarnation and the karma agent .

Each of these bodies is constituted of a progressively more subtle and energy substance variety from the etheric to the causal. Conditioning energies - vital, emotional, mental or causal - drain out into fine channels whose crossings constitute the particular energy centers called chakras in Sanskrit.

These vehicles included one into the other, a little like Russian dolls, are connected to the physical body with two "subtle threads": the thread of awareness is attached to the top of the skull, and the thread of life attached to the heart.

At the time of an individual physical death, the thread of awareness and the thread of life are cut, and the etheric vehicle detaches itself from the physical body taking with it the other subtle bodies. The vital body roughly takes three days to disintegrate itself, while the other mingled bodies usually rise toward subtler vibratory plans than the terrestrial physical existence one. According to the hold of the emotional world over the individual, his astral body takes a more or less long time to disintegrate itself in his turn, time that can amount to terrestrial years or ten years. After the astral body death, the mental body one occurs. Once this one achieved, the individual or entity, in the causal vehicle, gets in touch with the fraction of soul remained on her own existence plan and then doesn't possess any conscious memory of his recent terrestrial incarnation. The memory elements, of vibratory and energy nature, stay in three subtle particles: the etheric permanent atom that preserves the vital awareness state, the astral permanent atom that preserves the emotional awareness state, and the mental unit that preserves the state of concrete mental awareness.

During the reincarnation phase, the entity moves away from the soul and rebuilds its subtle bodies around the mental unit and the permanent atoms. The mental vehicle is first elaborated around the mental unit, according to this unit state and to the karmic conditions. Then, the astral body is built around the astral permanent atom while combining itself to the mental substance. Then the etheric body is created around the etheric atom, in relation with the two other bodies. At this stage, these subtle vehicles are not more than relatively embryonic. Finally, the whole of these vehicles integrates to the physical body in the maternal womb and the thread of life is then connected at the time of the birth, the thread of awareness a little later. At the time of the first puff of air breathed by the new "re-born", the specific quality of this air and the ether that accompany it gives an indelible vibratory impression to every cell of the physical body. This phenomenon, added to the fact of the ether spatiotemporal universality and therefore of its presence in every entity of the universe, from the atom to galaxies via planets and men, partially explains why the astrology at least roughly functions.

During the sleep a relatively similar process to the death and the rebirth one takes place: the subtle vehicles leave the physical body and the thread of awareness provisionally comes off it, but they don't disintegrate and the thread of life remains connected to the physical body. The individual then lives events sometimes really different from the physical plan ones. He is capable of levitating, flying, teleporting, realizing objects, speaking to the physically dead people, deforming his body, and of any more other feats. He really makes it in his subtle vehicles, thanks to etheric, astral or mental substances, or look at others when doing it and identify himself to the observed stage. Most of dream types stem from the more or less deformed memory of it that remains in mind when waking up after the subtle vehicle reintegration.

Chakras

The etheric body main energy centers are seven of them, located along the backbone:
to the bottom of the spine, the basal chakra, physical life center;
at the lumbar level, the sacred chakra, sexuality center;
at the solar plexus level, the solar chakra, emotions and sensations center;
between scapulas, the cardiac chakra, awareness and group responsibility center;
in the neck, the laryngeal chakra, mental and communication center;
at the forehead level, ajna or frontal chakra, personality center;
to the top of the head, coronal chakra, superior awareness and spiritual life center.

In addition, the bile center has an energy dispenser function.

These centers possess their physical counterpart in the endocrine glands:

Center	Gland
coronal	epiphysis
ajna	hypophysis
laryngeal	thyroid
cardiac	thymus
solar	pancreas
sacred	gonads
basal	adrenals

One can see them as kind of lotus with more or less open petals.

These centers are not similarly active nor developed in a given individual, and their vibratory rate, their rotation angular velocity, their brightness, their opening degree depends on the individual awareness and the degree of control he has in the corresponding plan or life sector for each of them.

Astrology and Astronomy.

Abenragel

House system based on the Ascendant or Descendant semidiurnal and seminocturnal arcs trisection, then the ecliptic intersection by big circles connecting the meridian and horizon intersection and the trisection points.

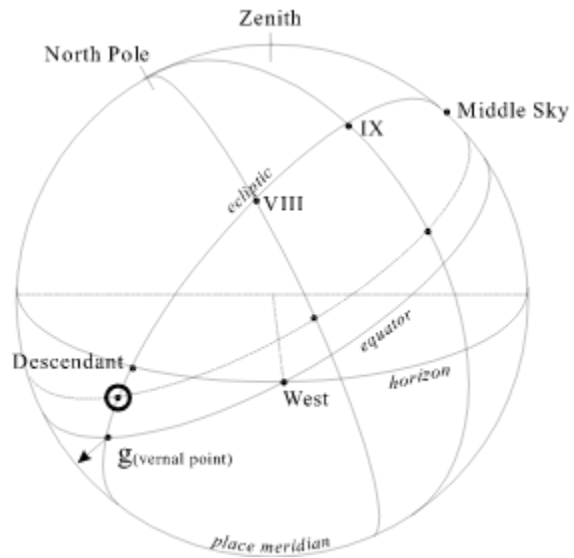

age

Moment of lunar phases in comparison with the new moon, given in days. The age is therefore worth zero for each new moon, 29.53 just before each new moon, and 14.76 ($= 29.53 / 2$) at the time of every full moon.

Albategnius

House system based on the Sun semidiurnal and seminocturnal arcs' trisection.

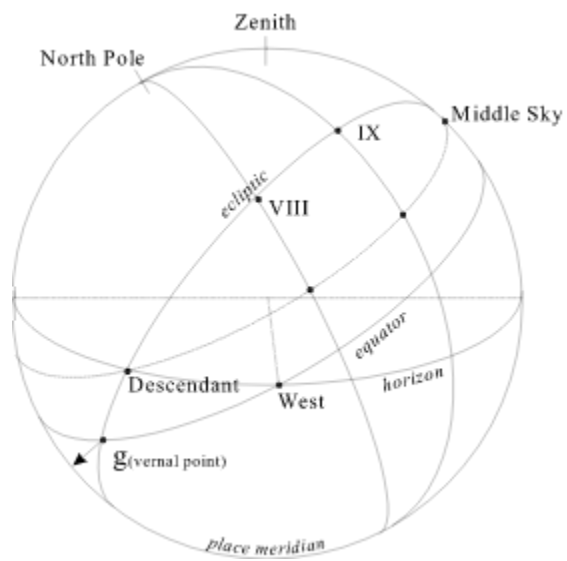

albedo

Planet reflective power, equal to reflected light divided by received one.

Alcabitius

House system based on the trisection of semidiurnal and seminocturnal arcs of Ascendant or Descendant, then the ecliptic intersection by timetable circles connecting the trisection points.

soul

Awareness aspect of a living being, arising out of Life and Matter.

ancient

House system based on 30° ecliptic houses, such as Maternus one, but with the Ascendant in the middle of the first house.

aphelion

The most distant point of the planet's orbit around the Sun.

ascendant

East horizon and ecliptic intersection point.

right ascension

The first of equatorial coordinate. It corresponds to the angle between the vernal point and the orthogonal projection of the considered planet or sky point position upon the equator.

aspect

Specific angular distance between the longitude of two planets or sky points, observed from the considered astrological event place.

A trine "aspect" corresponds, for example, to about a 120 degrees longitude difference. The aspect being considered with a few degrees or degree fraction "orb", according to the planets or sky points forming the aspect, a 127° distance between the Sun and the Moon is still considered as a trine, but this same distance between Pluto and a lunar node, for example, doesn't represent a trine, because of smaller orbs for aspects between two planets or sky points having lesser influence.

astral

Zone of substance, awareness, energy and vibration between the physical and the mental ones. The human beings, like the animals besides, have a body or "vehicle" of astral nature to experience emotions, desires and sensations. They practically use them each night when sleeping to travel out of their physical body and bring back on waking up, in the form of dreams, the scenes then lived, more or less misrepresenting them.

planet

Celestial bodies greater than asteroids, having hundreds kilometers radius, and turning around a star.

astrology

Science whose subject is the study of interaction between the Macrocosm and the microcosm, and notably between the solar system (including the Earth) and the human being individually or collectively considered.

astronomy

Science whose subject is the physical study of visible or observable objects in the space: galaxies, stars, planets, etc.

asteroid

Small celestial body invisible to the naked eye from the Earth and orbiting in the solar system. The great majority of known asteroids in the solar system is located in the "belt" between Mars and Jupiter.

ayanamsa

Longitude difference between the sidereal zodiac and the tropical one. Its value is about 23° during the 20th century.

azimuth

The first of local coordinates, corresponding to the angle between the place meridian and the vertical plan including the considered planet or sky point.

barycenter

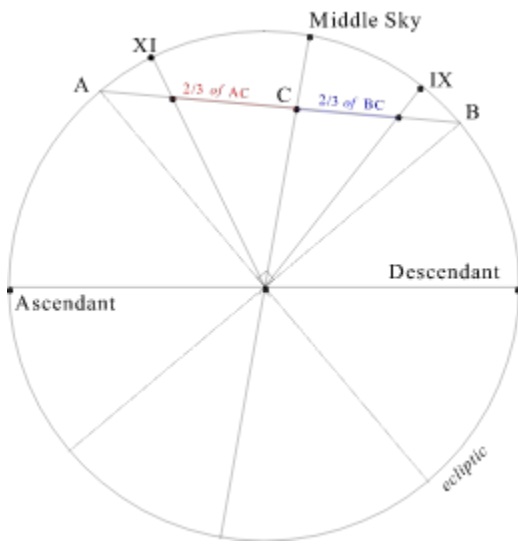

Point of balance between all the considered objects, taking in account their influence or their mass.

2-hours

House system based on the houses equality in right ascension from the meridian, each house corresponding to two sidereal hours.

Semi-angular

House system based on an angular geometric determination of the houses angular size.

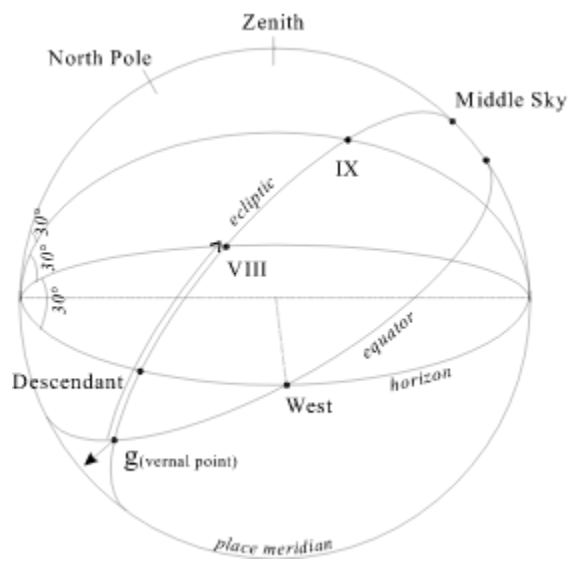

tool tip text

Software short explanatory text, contained in a small rectangle.

Campanus

House system based on the ecliptic intersection by 6 plans dividing the space (every 30°) around the intersection axis of the meridian and of the horizon.

causal

Zone of substance, awareness, energy and vibration existing in the upper part of mental one and corresponding to abstract and non-expressed ideas that will then be translated into more concrete terms by humans, thanks to their intellect or "concrete mental". The soul is located in this particular life "plan" that, contrary to physical, astral and lower mental ones, has no "shape".

comet

Celestial body having a small core (from some hundreds meters to several kilometers), made up of ice and of solid particles, and that produces a double "tail" when moving itself closer to the Sun. The tail dust is pulled out from the comet by the solar radiation (it is the brighter and curved tail) and the gaseous one comes from the ice sublimation by solar heat (it is the right and paler tail, in the opposite direction from the sun).

combination

Two or several sky charts combination obtained by calculating, for each planet (or sky point), the average position of the same planet in all initial charts, provided that these charts are established in the same coordinates system.

The Sun position in the combination chart of three initial ones in which the Sun longitude is respectively worth 120°, 245° and 200° is: $(120^\circ + 245^\circ + 202^\circ) / 3 = 189^\circ$.

awareness

Entity faculty of appreciate, know or comprehend its own reality in comparison with the outside world one. It can arise out of only the interaction between a Life (a Spirit) and a substantial Shape.

constellation

Astronomy: Apparent stars group on the celestial sphere, so that they seem to draw a special figure when one links them with imaginary lines.

Examples: Ursa Major, Taurus, and Canis Major constellations.

Esotericism: Zone of the celestial sphere from where emanates a typical energy, as constituent or representative of a cosmic entity.

context

Help that appears according to the active context (window)... when one presses the F1 key, and that explains one or several functions or characteristics of this context.

coordinates

Angle or distance measurements used to locate an object, a planet or a point in comparison with another one.

cusp

Initial and maximal influence point of an astrological house.

cycle

Two planets mutual cyclic motion, so that they repeat the same aspect after one or several periods.

declination

The second coordinate of equatorial, tropical or sidereal coordinates. It corresponds to the angle between the considered planet or the sky point and the equator.

Semimajor axis

The semimajor axis of an elliptic orbit is the half of the distance between the two furthest orbital points (the aphelion and the perihelion for orbits around the Sun, or the apogee and the perigee for orbits around the Earth).

density

Astronomy or physics: material concentration (being characterized by the "mass") of an objet in comparison with the water one (for a solid) or the air one (for a gas).

Esotericism: quantity of substance in a given space-time.

dimension

Mathematics: movement, extension, or expansion-contraction axis that is single or linearly independent of same type axis.

A cube has three dimensions: the height, the width and the thickness.

Esotericism: awareness state or mode of the reality perception.

dipole

Due to the existence of two electric or magnetic charges with opposite signs and being far apart.

primary directions

Forecasting system based on the calculation of a chart from the reference one, according to the correspondence:

1 degree apparent rotation of a planet on the celestial sphere because of the rotation of the Earth on the polar axis is equivalent to 1 year.

secondary directions

Forecasting system based on the calculation of a chart from the reference one, according to the correspondence:
the real planet longitude variation in 1 day is equivalent to 1 year.

symbolic directions

Forecasting system based on the calculation of a chart from the reference one, according to the correspondence:
arbitrary increasing of a planet longitude by 1 degree per 1 year

house point

See cusp.

houses

Zodiac division into twelve sectors builds from the event location, according to a special rule that depends on the used system.

eclipse

Three planets alignment phenomenon. From the Earth, two eclipses types due to the Sun and Moon can be observed: the solar eclipse when the Moon moves between the Sun and the observer; and the lunar eclipse when the Moon moves into the Earth cone of shadow.

ecliptic

Terrestrial orbit plan where the planets and the Sun seemingly move around the Earth.

ecliptic coordinates

Geocentric (or planetocentric) coordinates based on the ecliptic.

ellipticity

Character more or less oblate of a sphere or a circle.

emotional

Having the nature of desires and emotions and coming close to what is called "mirage" in esotericism.

energy

Physics: capacity of a system to produce a "work" (such as to move itself or to lose its shape); the subtle system element whose quantity decreases in favor of the done work.

Esotericism: capacity of an entity to eat, to change, to act, to think, etc...; the subtle element used by the entity to do any form of action, including thinking.

The energy changes into work and the work can produce energy.

entity

Life being and/or group of beings having in varying degrees, according to its nature, three aspects: Life, Awareness and Shape, at least when it is in the phenomenon plans.

equator

Perpendicular plan to the rotation axis of the considered planet.

equatorial regular

House system based on the ecliptic intersection by plans dividing the equator into three equal parts between the meridian and the Ascendant half-plan, and into three other equal parts between the meridian and the Descendant (opposite to the Ascendant) half-plan.

equatorial

Geocentric (or planetocentric) coordinates based on the equator and the pole axis.

equinox

Each of the two moments in a year - spring and fall - when the day duration is equal to the night one.

esotericism

Science studying the hidden causes of phenomena and of the universe, in contrast to all that is apparent or "exoteric".

space-time

Physics: place of observable phenomena. The space-time is the phenomena container, according to their extension or quantity aspect (spatial part) and to their duration one (time part). Human sees it as a three dimensions' space and a one dimension' time.

Esotericism: place of the life manifestation in the "Shape". The space-time is the container for the quantitative and qualitative cyclic manifestation of the life in the shape.

spirit

Stimulating and causal aspect of entities and of the Universe.

ether

Upper part of the physical plan, and vitality medium. Vital substance in these sub-plans. More generally, we talk about the more subtle substance in each plan.

etheric

Having the nature of the ether.

star

Celestial body that produces energy including light form one.

event

Any individual or collective fact, human, cultural, social, political or of an other nature phenomenon, or any either unremarkable or remarkable situation or action, taking place on Earth or even elsewhere, that one can better explain, know, or understand using the astrology.

eccentricity

Character more or less elongated of a planet's orbit.

force

Physics: any cause capable of deforming a body or of modifying its movement (direction and/or speed).

Esotericism: consequence of the energy impact for the shape. for example, an energy of courage gives the strength to confront a given situation, to take up a challenge, to accomplish an action or to say such and such words.

shape

Physics: specific spatial demarcation of a system.

Esotericism: organization and concentration location of the universal substance; local aggregate of physical, astral or mental more or less organized substance.

frequency

Number of vibrations, cycles or other repetitive phenomena taking place per second. The frequency is the inverse of the period.

galaxy

Group of several millions or billions of stars.

geocentric

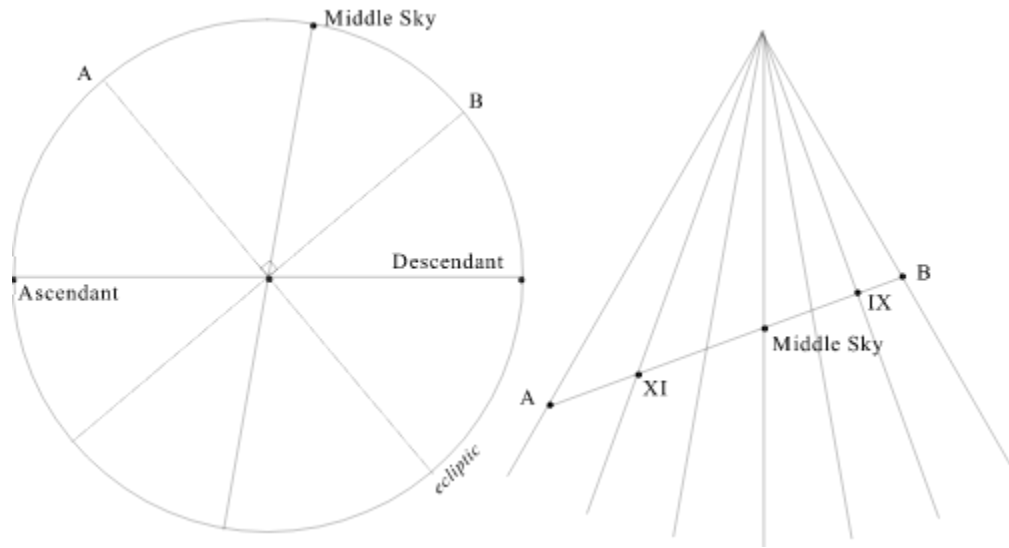

Whose center is the Earth.

Colin Evans

House system based on an algebraic "geometric" determination of the houses angular size.

Bazchenoff

House system based on a geometric determination of the houses angular size.

elevation

The second of local coordinates. It corresponds to the angle between the considered planet or sky point and the horizon.

scale height

Altitude for which the atmosphere pressure is the half of the see level one

heliocentric

Whose center is the Sun.

human

Entity being a member of the fourth "kingdom" of the nature after the mineral, plant and animal ones, whatever the planet where this entity becomes incarnate.

incarnation

Fact for an entity of breathing is life into a shape (a body) to develop the awareness aspect. Many entities become incarnate either in the mineral, plant, animal or human kingdom, when other ones, notably more evolved becomes incarnate in planets, in stars, in solar systems or even in galaxies.

orbit inclination

Angle between the orbit plan of a planet and the ecliptic.

inertia

Physics: faculty of resistance to motion or to the movement modification.

Esotericism: resistance to change, whatever its nature (change of character, of mood, of beliefs, of ideals, of ideas, etc).

intuition

Subtle sense or means of reality perception that enables to free oneself from the astral mirages and the mental illusions. It is more reliable and more universal than the five usual senses or than the astral ones such as the perceptiveness.

karma

Part of the Causality law that requires the compensation for any abuse when using physical, astral (or emotional) and mental energies, all the more so as this use is conscious.

Imun Colei

the opposite point of Medium Colei. Imun Colei is Latin for "bottom of the heavens".

Koch

House system based on the trisection of semidiurnal arcs of Medium Colei and seminocturnal arcs of Imun Colei, then on the determination of eastern cusps along the ecliptic from semicircles connecting the eastern horizon, and of western houses from semicircles connecting the western horizon.

latitude

Angle measure between the position of a planet, a virtual sky point or a place and the equatorial plan.

The second of ecliptic coordinates, corresponding to the angle between the ecliptic and the considered planet or sky point.

local

Based on the latitude and the longitude of observation place. these coordinates are "topocentric" when centered around the observation place, but "geocentric" when centered around the planet center.

Causality law

The law that any cause as effects and any effect comes from causes. In particular, every tangible event or phenomenon is inevitably the consequence of at least intangible or subtle facts.

Measure of the angle between the place meridian and the Greenwich (in Great Britain) one.

The first of ecliptic, tropical and sidereal coordinates, corresponding to the angle between the vernal point and the plan that is orthogonal to the ecliptic and connecting the considered planet or sky point.

macrocosm

Large entity of the Universe, or the Universe itself.

magnitude

Measure of the planets' brightness so that a planet of magnitude x is 10 times more luminous than an other one of magnitude $x+1$. One discerns the "visual" magnitude (that measures the visible planets' luminosity from the observation place) and the "absolute" one (that measures the luminosity of planets as if they were all at the same distance from the observation place).

house

Existence domain represented on a chart by the zone between two cusps.

mass

Quantity of matter, measured in kilograms (kg).

Maternus

House system based on houses having 30° angular size along the ecliptic , from either the Ascendant or the Medium Coeli.

matter

Physics: condensed energy form; celestial body or universe constituent having a mass.

Esotericism: condensed or non-etheric substance in each plans of the "manifestation" (the space-time materialization).

mental

Having the nature of ideas and concrete or abstract thoughts.

meridian

Plan connecting the geographic poles.

microcosm

Small entity of the Universe, such as a human being for example.

Medium Colei or Midheaven

Intersection between the place meridian and the ecliptic, on the South side.

Midpoint

Average point between two planets, stars or virtual points, in the zodiac.

moment of inertia

Characterize the more or less high angular velocity of an object having a rotational movement on an axis and the more or less high difficulty to modify this velocity, due to its inertia.

Nadir

Point of the celestial sphere on the observer vertical, below its feet.

node

Intersection point between an orbit and a reference plan such as the ecliptic.

nodal

House system based on houses having 30° angular size along the ecliptic , from the north node.

obliquity

Inclination, in degrees, between the ecliptic and the rotation axis of a planet.

occultism

Science studying invisible phenomena hidden behind the tangible ones.

Uncertainty or angular permitted variations concerning the theoretical value of an aspect, so that the angular distance between two planets can be considered as such and such aspect, even if its value is only approximately correct.

Example: If the accepted orb for a trine between the Sun and Mars is worth 9° and if the angular distance between these two planets is 113° instead of theoretical 120° for a trine, one nevertheless considers this distance as a trine aspect, because 120° more or less 9° covers the 111° to 129° space that indeed contains the 113° angle.

orbit

Path of a celestial body around an other one or a center of attraction.

The orbit of the Earth around the Sun is a slightly oblate circle named ellipse.

orthogonal projection

Projection onto a plan along a perpendicular direction to this plan, like the shadow produced by the sun onto a horizontal ground if the sun were on the plane vertical.

part

Point of a chart calculated by adding the angular distance between two planets or sky points to the position of a third one.

In tropical coordinates, the part named "Fortune" is calculated by: Ascendant longitude + (Moon one - Sun one).

perihelion

The nearest point of the planet's orbit around the Sun.

period

Length of a repetitive phenomenon. The period is the frequency inverse. Example: if an objet turns around its axis with a 10 seconds period, is rotation frequency is worth $1/10=0.1$ cycles per second (or 0.1 "hertz").

personality

Human being constituent resulting from the homogeneous integration of its physical, astral and mental "vehicles" or bodies.

gravity

A planet gravitational attraction, due to its mass.

phase

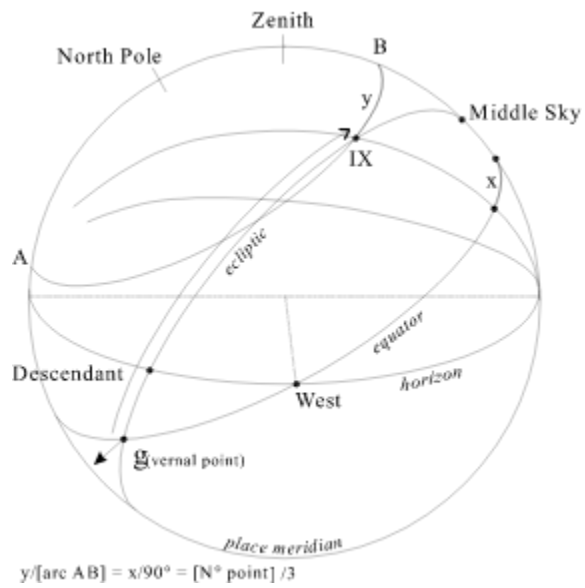

Aspect shown by the Moon to the Earth, due to its illumination by the Sun: "full moon" (completely lit), first or last "quarter" (half lit), or "new moon" (not lit), for example. It is the case for any natural satellite in comparison with its planet due to the central star illumination, or for any planet in comparison with an other one, like Venus in comparison with the Earth.

physical

Having a tangible, concrete, formal, or material nature.

Placidus

House system based on the hourly identical division of all the semidiurnal and seminocturnal arcs.

plan

Astronomy and mathematics: space having two dimensions.

Esotericism: Entity or vibratory space with special frequency and nature, physical, astral or mental ones for example.

planet

Astronomy: spherical and massive celestial body orbiting around the Sun or around an other star.

Astrology: object of the zodiac that individually and collectively more or less influences the human beings, in one or several life sectors.

Esotericism: physical body of an entity considerably more evolved than a human being.

weight

Force exerted by an object or by an entity on other ones, due to the gravity.

pole

A planet or a celestial sphere point perpendicular to the equator. The rotation direction of the planet enables to define the North pole as the one towards which the planet would move if it turned like a corkscrew that one sticks into a cork. The South pole is the opposite one.

Porphyre

House system based on the ecliptic division of the Ascendant-Imun Colei arc into three equal angles, and of the Medium Colei-Ascendant one into three other equal angles.

topographic range

Distance from the place to the horizon.

pressure

Force exerted per unit of surface area. The more the surface onto which one exerts a given force is small, the more the resulting pressure is important. So, because of his weight a man can sink in the snow by several centimeters, but when he puts skis or snowshoes, he increases the contact surface area with the snow and consequently reduces the pressure, so that he almost no longer sinks.

precession of the equinox

Rotational movement, like a top spin, on the terrestrial axis in the retrograde direction, so that the North geographic pole is not fixed but describes a clockwise circle. This movement has a more than 25,000 years period.

equatorial radius

Average radius of a planet in the equatorial plan.

polar radius

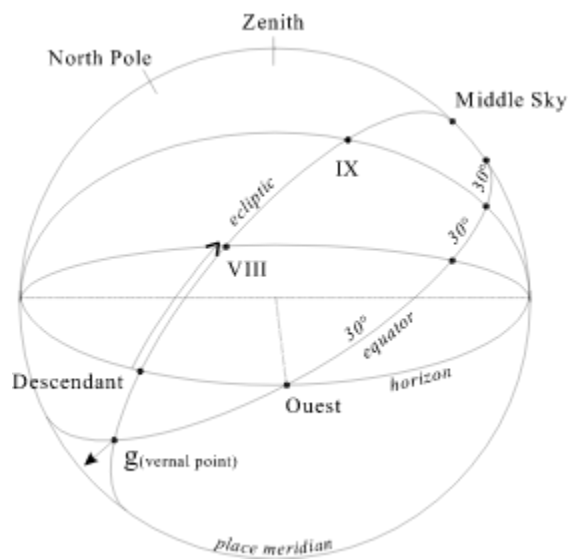

Average radius of a planet in a plan connecting the geographic poles.

solar irradiance

Electromagnetic waves emitted by the Sun, mainly in form of light, but also of ultraviolet and infrared rays, due to its energy production from the internal thermonuclear fusion reactions.

Regiomontanus

House system based on the ecliptic intersection by 6 plans dividing the space (every 30°) around the intersection axis of the meridian and of the horizon, so as to divide the equator into 30° parts.

kingdom

Group of living species or of entities having the same nature and similar levels of awareness.

The first kingdom (the less evolved) is the mineral one. The other ones are, in ascending order, the plant, animal, human, and the "Hierarchic" (in the process of appearing) ones.

reincarnation

Process consisting, for an entity as soul, in coming again more or less regularly into incarnation into the same kingdom, until its command of "vehicles" or bodies types used by this kingdom is perfect and until the awareness it can express with them reaches the optimum, by dint of numerous and various experimentation and tests. The karma law governs this process.

The transition from a kingdom to the next only occurs during the critical and "initiatory" phase, characteristic of the initial kingdom:

- radioactivity, to rise from mineral kingdom to plant one;
- perfumed radiation, from plant to animal;
- devotedly radiation by domestication, from animal to human.

From the human kingdom to the Hierarchy, the transfer method is more complex and the individual karma must be cleared.

revolution

Elliptical or cyclic motion of a planet around a "central" star, such as the Earth revolution around the Sun during one year.

sidereal revolution

Revolution having fixed considered stars as frame of reference from the central star, but not from the orbiting planet.

rotation

Cyclic motion of a planet on its axis, such as the Earth one in 24 hours.

satellite

Secondary and less massive celestial body orbiting around a planet, such as the Moon around the Earth.

sexagesimal

Based on the 60 numerical base, such as the hours, minutes and seconds: 60 seconds = 1 minute, and 60 minutes = 1 hour.

sidereal

Coordinates based on the ecliptic and the constellations (considered as fixed from the solar system), but not on the vernal point.

signs

30° zones of zodiac whose the first, named "Aries" begins at the vernal or first point.

One

The inner man or the inner and spiritual nature of an entity.

solar

House system based on 30° equal houses along the ecliptic, and beginning to the Sun position.

solstice

Moment of the year when the day duration is minimum or maximum. When it is the winter solstice, the day duration is minimum, and when it is the summer one, it is maximum.

celestial sphere

The sky around a planet.

substance

All the fundamental energies resulting of the first time and space differentiation. Aggregate of atomic and subatomic lives all the shapes of which are created in the space-time.

subtle

Being the opposite of the density, of the materiality, of tangible or formal things.

comparison

Comparison of two sky charts calculated with the same coordinates system and the same house system:

- aspects between the planets and points of the first chart and those of the second one.
- position of the first chart planets in the second one houses, and vice versa.

synodic

Revolution or interval between two successive appearances of the same phase of the considered planet in comparison with the Earth and au Sun.

black-body temperature

Temperature of a star liken to a "black" body from which no light escapes, because only the star surface is considered to be a light transmitter and the internal part is like a dark room absorbing any possible light.

transit

A planet apparent position at the same longitude as the planet one of a given chart (or forming an aspect with this planet), at a latter date than the given chart one.

Example: Saturn orbiting opposite its initial position, about 15 years after the date of considered chart.

tropical

Coordinates based on the ecliptic, the equator and the vernal point.

vector

Mathematical element characterized by a line, a direction, and an intensity or measurable segment.

vernal

The vernal point is the ecliptic and the equator intersection, on the side where the first crosses to the North of the second one. At the vernal equinox (about march the 21), the Sun is in the vernal point direction. This point is the tropical zodiac beginning (its longitude is the zero degree of the Aries sign).

vertical

On a given planet and place, the vertical is the direction including the planet center of gravity, that is the one embodied by a plumb line put in this place.

Life

Universe aspect that impregnates all the shapes, all substances, all energies, the whole matter, the light, the atoms, the entities...

escape velocity

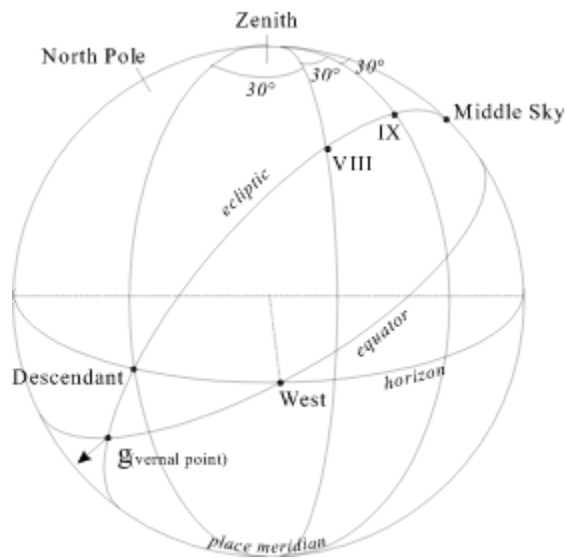

Necessary velocity for a material body to escape the gravitational attraction of a planet.

Wiesel

House system similar to the 2-hours one, but beginning at the Ascendant position.

zenithal

House system based on the ecliptic intersection by 6 plans dividing the space (every 30°) around the Zenith-Nadir axis.

Zenith

Celestial sphere point in the observer vertical, above him.

zodiacal

House system similar to the Maternus one, but beginning to the Ascendant sign zero degree.

zodiac

Zone of the celestial sphere in which apparently move the Sun and the planets.
