Registering DeltaPoint QuickSite

If you have purchased QuickSite, before beginning, please complete and return your registration card with the serial number found on disk 1. You may also register QuickSite by calling DeltaPoint or contacting us via e-mail, or by using the registration form on the DeltaPoint QuickSite home page. ## Purchasing QuickSite

If you are evaluating QuickSite under its 30-day trial period, you are welcome to create and publish Web sites until the evaluation period expires. At that time, QuickSite's build and publish functionality will become disabled. To purchase QuickSite and obtain a registration number, please contact DeltaPoint sales.

Release Notes

Following are features and other issues that are not described in the QuickSite documentation.

The Apple Shared Library Manager

QuickSite requires that the Apple Shared Library Manager (ASLM) be installed. If it is not found, the QuickSite installer will notify you that you need to install ALSM from the diskette marked "ASLM Installer" in your QuickSite distribution disk set. Note: Be sure to use the Easy Install option when running the ASLM installer on a Power Macintosh system. QuickSite will not function properly unless both the PowerPC and 68000 versions of the Shared Library Manager are installed.

AppleScript

In order for QuickSite to function properly, AppleScript must be enabled on your system. If you have trouble launching QuickSite, make sure that the AppleScript extension is enabled in your startup management utility (i.e., Extensions Manager, Now Startup Manager, Conflict Catcher).

Global Village TelePort and PowerPort Modem Users

Some users have experienced a conflict between QuickSite and Global Village TelePort and PowerPort software. To avoid this conflict, open the TelePort or PowerPort Control Panel and turn off the "Show Status" option.

Adding Descriptive Text to Page Titles

When QuickSite generates automatic links to pages, the links typically consist only of the title of the page. However, if you would like to add some descriptive text that follows the link to the page, simply append the descriptive text to the page title (in the page's designer), enclosed in brackets.

For example, if you specify "Products and Services [--the latest information on our line of quality products]" as the title of your page, the text in brackets will appear after the colored, underlined link to the Products and Services page.

The maximum number of characters for a page title is 128.

All Projects Must Be Located in the QuickSite Directory

Do not create, build, or test projects located outside the QuickSite application folder ("DeltaPoint QuickSite™" by default). All project folders must be located in the QuickSite folder in order for links and other references to be properly maintained. When creating a new project, QuickSite automatically creates a project folder in the proper location.

Avoiding Projects Named "Contents" or "Index"

QuickSite automatically generates and manages files called "CONTENTS.HTM" and "INDEX.HTM" for all projects. QuickSite also automatically generates a home page file that corresponds to the name of your project. Avoid naming your projects "Contents" or "Index" to ensure that no confusion occurs between your home page and contents and index pages.

Custom Page Support

You can instruct QuickSite not to automatically generate header and footer information for a text page. This allows you to create completely custom pages in which QuickSite uses only the HTML present in the page designer's "Web Page Text" field. To create a custom page, include the following HTML comment anywhere in the Web Page Text field:

This approach is useful for creating custom home pages while maintaining support for caret notation and other advanced QuickSite capabilities.
