X-FILES – DEVELOPER INFORMATION

Greg Roach, Interactive Filmmaker and Multimedia Artist

Greg Roach is the CEO and Artistic Director of HyperBole Studios, which he founded in 1990.   Greg, who holds a M.F.A. in directing, was the associate artistic director at Stages Repertory Theatre in Houston when he left to pursue multimedia.   A playwright, his radio play, Horse Arms, won the North American premiere of Riddley Walker, worked as a lighting and set designer and as a puppeteer, and acted both on stage and screen, appearing in everything from a Midsummer Night's Dream to an episode of America's Most Wanted.

Considered a multimedia pioneer, Greg wrote and designed the Madness of Roland, the world's first original interactive multimedia novel. As a filmmaker, he created the groundbreaking narrative interactive film, The Wrong Side of Town, the Best of Show winner at the first QuickTime Film Festival. Since then, Greg's interactive movies have garnered more than a dozen awards around the world.   He also created VirtualCinema, which is both an engine and a narrative approach to interactive movies.   This technology served as the foundation for Quantum Gate and The Vortex, HyperBole's most recent most recent releases, and is now the cornerstone of HyperBole's titles.   Greg is currently in development on The X-Files CD-ROM Adventure, for Fox Interactive, as well as several on-line projects.

He has been a featured speaker at many conferences and trade shows, including New York Women in Film, Comdex, E3, and the American Chamber of Commerce in London. In addition, he is the member of the guest faculty at San Francisco State University.

Halle Eavelyn, President BA, Communications, University of Maryland

One of the founding partners of HyperBole Studios, Halle is responsible for the company's business organisation.   As the original Director of Marketing, she laid the groundwork for the company using an aggressive PR campaign for HyperBole's rapid emergence as a leader in multimedia.

With a degree in communications, Halle has considerable experience in retail and customer service, which helped her to gain a wide perspective on industry sales.   She has also worked in telemarketing, and as a columnist and sales rep for an entertainment newspaper.   Her experience in acting and public speaking assists her in keeping HyperBole's message on the leading edge of the industry.

As Executive Producer for Quantum Gate and The Vortex, she successfully led both titles to market by overcoming considerable obstacles.   Halle's present concerns are the day-to-day business of running the company, acting as a liaison between the project divisions, and propelling the studio to it's next stage of development.   She also speaks on a local and national level, regarding the business of running a company or on the state of the multimedia industry.   Past speaking engagements include Intermedia, IICS, 911 Media Arts, and various universities.   Currently, Halle is the Executive Producer for The X-Files, which HyperBole is developing for Fox Interactive.

Paul Wayne Hiaumet, Composer and founding Partner

One if the original founders of HyperBole Studios, Paul serves as the company's one-man sound studio.   A musician and composer for the past seventeen years, Paul composes, arranges, performs, records, produces and engineers all sound and music for our interactive titles.   In addition, Paul manages the sound production and editing for video, and all contractors in the sound department.

As a writer, Paul has conceived and written such interactive works as "In the Breach of Centuries", a historical novel about the catastrophic Galveston, Texas hurricane of 1900. But his most popular writing focuses mainly on black comedy, and Paul's stories, complete with quirky doodles and animations, have appeared often in HyperBole's interactive magazine, and are now available online on their web site.

Paul has published several works of short fiction and poetry.   Having just completed his first full-length novel, a murder mystery, Paul is currently working on his second.

Visit our website:
www.playstation-europe.com

Developer: Fox Interactive	Genre: Action /Adventure :	No of Players : 1
Peripherals: Controller, Memory Card		