FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

ENIX ANNOUNCES 2002 PRODUCTS
'ROBOT ALCHEMIC DRIVE' AND 'GRANDIA XTREME'
HEADLINE PLAYSTATION®2 LINE-UP

SEATTLE, WA, April XX, 2002 – Fast on the heels of one of the company's most successful years featuring the Dragon Warrior series, Enix America Inc. today announced two new games for 2002. Available this Fall are Robot Alchemic Drive (RAD) and Grandia Xtreme, both for the PlayStation®2 computer entertainment system.

“Our 2002 lineup showcases destructive action via a robotic simulation, as well as technical innovations in an ultimate RPG battle system that are sure to thrill all gamers,” said Paul Handelman, president of Enix America. “We’re confident that these products will truly define and further establish Enix America as a quality publisher of top-tier titles.”

Robot Alchemic Drive or RAD truly transcends the established game genres. Classified as an action game, RAD allows players to assume the role of a robot handler who must learn to remotely control a monstrosly sized robot and engage in fantastic combat with gigantic aliens that are invading earth. Action occurs on two planes as large scale combat between giant robots wrecks tremendous destruction while at the same time, the humans controlling the robots need to run for cover from falling debris, collapsing buildings and automobile traffic all while trying to avoid being crushed by their robot.
