Welcome to the Celebrity Address Book

This electronic book offers the reader access to address and career information for several hundred celebrities in the entertainment industry. And in addition the reader can learn the basics of collecting celebrity autographs and use the information contained in this book to begin building a collection of autographs with a minimal investment in money.

Every effort has been made to ensure that the celebrity information contained in this book is accurate and up to date. We have consulted the most recent industry directories and entertainment publications to compile and present the information contained in this book. However, most celebrities listed in this book maintain fairly active careers so that the career information presented will by its nature always be out of date. And the reader should keep in mind that celebrity addresses can and do change on a regular basis as celebrities change agents, managers, public relations people, and even move to new homes.

Because the focus of this electronic book has been written for the novice autograph collector, the career information we have compiled has been for the use of the autograph collector as they write the letters to the celebrities requesting autographs. So we have only selected what we felt was the most relevant career information that the prospective letter writer would want to know to help in their letter writing, and should not by any means be considered a complete record of a specific career. As most of the people listed in this directory are actors and actresses the career information will mostly list movie and tv credits. People from the music lists will generally have a list of their album credits.

We have also provided information on the signing habits of a celebrity as we currently know about it for both in-person and mail requests. However it should be noted by the reader that these habits can change literally overnight, so it is important to keep up to date on these habits by subscribing to autograph related publications, talking to other autograph collectors and dealers, and making use of autograph related areas on online services.

We will in the course of time continue to develop and update address and career information for the listed celebrities and add new celebrities to the lists in future releases of this electronic publication. We hope to make this electronic publication one of the prime reference publication for anyone interested in starting the exciting hobby of autograph collecting. And we would like to hear from our readers for any suggestions that can add and improve upon this publication. You can contact this author by the following means.

How To Begin Collecting Autographs

To begin with the novice collector of autographs should ask themselves what their main motivation is in collecting autograph materials. Is it to build an investment portfolio to complement other investments, or is to complement some other hobby that they may already have been long involved in. Because you see there are a wide variety of different types of autograph materials available to the collector, and some types of materials are more better suited for use as investment grade items if you are building an investment portfolio then if you are collecting items for a more casual personal interest. Once the main motivation for building a collection is determined, the collector should try to tie their collection to some personal interest(s). The rest of this chapter shall discuss the types of materials that are available to the collector, the common types of topical collections that can be developed, where and how to obtain autograph materials, how to preserve your collection.

TYPES OF AUTOGRAPH MATERIALS

Autographs alone are just a small segment of the much larger world of historical documents that are available to the collector. But we shall begin with autographs themselves and then discuss the other types of historical documents.

A. Autographs. Most people associate autographs with the signature of a famous person. But in reality autograph material can be anything that is written entirely in the hand of a person as well as material that may simply be signed by an individual. Some examples of such material can include handwritten letters, works of art such as drawings and sketches, notes, envelopes, etc. All the materials are distinguished by the fact that the material was written or created by an individual. A handwritten letter that is signed by an individual is classified as a Manuscript Letter Signed. In the world of historical documents there are a variety of terms used to describe both autograph and historical document material. Some of the most common terms used among autograph collectors are defined and found in the Glossary of Terms.

Autograph signatures can be classified based on the types of material that the signature is found on. For example, signatures can most commonly be found on blank index card stock paper. But other types of cards can also be commonly found. These include business cards, Hall of Fame cards, sports cards, Star Trek cards, White House cards among others. Another common source for finding autograph signatures is on checks. And signed checks can be classified as either a "Check Signed" that has been signed by an individual to someone else, or as a "Check Endorsed" when the check has been signed to an individual and is endorsed by the noted individual.

B. Manuscripts. Manuscript items are generally a piece of writing such as a short story or book manuscript, an essay, a piece of music. Manuscripts can be found in written or typed form and can be signed or unsigned, but they at least represent some form of intellectual creation by a specific individual. Manuscripts found in original handwritten form are classified as "Autograph Manuscripts". When such a manuscript has also been signed it will be referred to as a "Autograph Manuscript Signed".

C. Autograph Quotations & Typescripts. In this category you will find documents that attempt to recite a famous quote or segment of a poem, or to duplicate a specified document that is tied to a noted individual and then signed by the same person. Autograph quotations will be often used to represent a copy of a poem, the lyrics of a song, or a phrase that was written by or made famous by a noted individual and then signed by the individual. Autograph typescripts are attempts made to duplicate or produce similar documents of noted historical documents that are then signed by the persons associated to that documents. Famous examples of this type of autograph material are typescripts of Karl Doenitz "Instrument of Surrender" during World War II and signed by Mr. Doenitz, reproductions of President Richard M. Nixon's letter of resignation that are signed by the late President, and reproductions of President Gerald R. Ford's pardon of Richard M. Nixon signed by President Ford. It should be noted that President Ford is apparently no longer signing copies of the Nixon pardon, but is still signing other material for people requesting his autograph signature.

D. Documents. Two types of documents are often referred to in this category. The first are forms that are filled in by hand or that relate to a public figure during their life. And the second are materials that are related to a specific historical event. Examples can include maps, stock certificates, deeds, wills, birth and death certificates, licenses and many more types can be found.

E. Photographs. Signed photographs are a very popular means of autograph collecting for a large segment of collectors. Photographs of notable people can be found from a variety of sources for a very reasonable amount that can then be sent to a celebrity for them to sign and return. Autographed photos are often referred to as a "Signed Photo". A photo that is signed and that is inscribed to a specific person is described as a "Inscribed Photo". And photos signed and bearing additional notations are described as a "Annotated Photo Signed".

F. Books. Signed books has generally been a fairly popular category of autograph collectors. And in fact this category can be one of the easiest in which to build a nice collection of autographed items if you decide to focus on modern authors. Since major authors often go on book signing tours to major cities across the country you may find yourself lucky enough to attend several book signings in the course of a year if you live near a large metropolitan center. And even if you live in a small city you may still find that there are several locally published authors who will work with their local bookstore to offer a book signing when they have a new book published. The easiest way to find about local book signings is to check regularly with the managers of your local bookstores and check the announcements in your local paper as these events are often announced days in advance. And if your main focus is to collect autographed books of a specific author or category of authors and there are no book signings in your local area you can often send a book to the author care of the publisher and request them to sign and return the book. Some guidelines for doing this will be discussed in another section of this book.

G. First Day Covers. These items will commemorate a person or event through the issuing of a new stamp from the post office with the stamp appearing on a related specially prepared "Cover" or envelope that will often contain special related artwork. Stamp collectors will often collect these First Day Covers (FDC) by topic such as Space Exploration, Music, Movies, Sports, etc. You can often tie a noted celebrity from current times to a topical First Day Cover issue and have the celebrity sign the FDC.

H. Sports Related Memorabilia. This category often involves the collecting of sports celebrity signatures on the related sports equipment. For example Baseball players sign baseballs, Football players sign footballs, Basketball players sign basketballs, and Hockey players sign hockey pucks and sticks. And nearly any player from these sports can also sign reproduction jerseys. Collectors of these types of items should be forewarned however that this part of the autograph market has experienced a major BOOM market the last few years and so some prices may be overinflated in value and there has been a lot of forged items found in the marketplace. It's important therefore the collector either obtain their autographed items in person or through a very reputable dealer to verify that the items are authentic.

BUILDING YOUR COLLECTION

At this point you now have a basic understanding of the different types of autograph materials that are available to the collector. So now you must develop a plan of what it is that you are going to collect. Since your collection will reflect your personality and interests you need to make a basic assesment of what those interests are and then do a little research to prepare a list of names of individuals that relate to your interested topics. You can then gauge the depth of who and what you want to collect. Now, as a general rule autograph collections fall into three categories.

1. The Specific Topic Collection. In this collection the autographed items revolve around a specific noted individual (i.e. Thomas Jefferson), concern a specific subject (i.e. Physics), a period of history (i.e. The Civil War), or a specific event or issue (i.e. Manned missions to the Moon, or the Equal Rights Amendment). This type of collection is often noted for its DEPTH in the collected items.

2. The Cluster Topic Collection. This type of collection does not contain the same depth as in the specific topic collection, but often is more concerned with specific noted individuals who share a common theme. Examples of such collections may include Authors of the Pacific Northwest, signers of the Declaration of Independence, American Presidents, Chief Justices of the U.S. Supreme Court, Superbowl Quarterbacks. The topics available to collectors for specific and cluster collections are endless.

3. The General Collection. This collection can be as specific or as eclectic as the collector wishes it to be. A general collection can deal with one subject such as Figure Skating or deal with totally unrelated individuals but whom the collector simply admires.

So now you have determined what type of materials your are going to collect and what type collection your are going to build. Now you ask, how do I get the autograph items?. Well if your collection is going to deal with noted individuals that are still living you simply have to ask them for it. Of course its generally not an easy thing to simply meet everyone whose autograph you seek and ask them for it unless maybe you happen to live in New York City or Beverly Hills and can spend all your time at the trendiest, hippest celebrity hot spots in those cities. But if you dont live in those two citites it still is possible to meet some celebrities if your pay attention, and the next section goes into detail about getting the autograph.

1. Meeting the Celebrities. Most of us common folk dont happen to live in New York or Los Angeles where a lot of celebrities make their homes, but celebrities do travel to other cities to promote their latest projects or to do something related to their work such as appear in a travelling Broadway play or to make a movie. So its important to pay attention to announcements in your local newspaper as often they will tell you when a special promotional event is going to take place with a celebrity, or when a movie is going to be produced, or a concert is going to take place. Once you start paying attention to local events in your area you may find yourself surprised at the sheer numbers of celebrities that come through your area for a limited time. In my own hometown of Medford, Oregon and our surrounding communities that we call the Rogue Valley we have had several movie productions occur over the last 20 years that include Rooster Cogburn (with John Wayne & Katherine Hepburn). In fact the State of Oregon itself has been developing a strong film industry where we now have several movie productions occur throughout the state every year offering opportunities for autograph collectors living in Oregon. And locally we have several published authors whose books have been placed on the national best seller lists and been well reviewed. And our local country music station KRWQ often brings in several country music concerts each year to our local area that features the top country music performers such as Chris LeDoux and Colin Ray who had concerts this past summer (of 1995). And because of the beauty and living conditions of our area we even have several celebrities who have moved to the area including most notably Ginger Rogers who actually lived in the area since the 1940's until her recent death.

Once you found when and where a celebrity may be in your area then it's just a matter of being there and often times simply waiting for the opportunity to introduce yourself and make the request for an autograph. In making the request for an autograph from a celebrity you should do so with POLITENESS AND RESPECT. It can't be stressed enough how important that is when making a request because so many celebrities have been turned off by the unfriendly actions of autograph collectors to where some celebrities refuse to sign autographs for anyone. I have read and heard of many instances of where a celebrity was asked for an autograph while they were having dinner in a restaurant. Talk about being unfriendly, who would want to have their dinner interrupted by someone you don't know, and when you have a mouthful of food that you're trying to digest. In these cases the celebrity has often and quite rightly refused to fulfill the autograph request. If the collector truly had respect for the celebrity they could simply have waited after the celebrity finished dinner and was prepared to leave to make the autograph request and in all probability the request would have been granted. One celebrity who refuses all autograph requests these days is Paul Newman simply because he was asked for an autograph while he was relieving himself in a public restroom. And so the thoughtless actions of one person has ruined the opportunity for many other people to obtain an autograph from this popular actor. And considering the situation can you really blame Paul Newman? And so before you make that autograph request THINK ABOUT THE SITUATION and consider what would be the most polite and courteous way to handle the request.

So if you pay attention to local events in your area you can meet some celebrities and with proper Courtesy, Politeness, and Respect you can obtain those celebrity autographs.

2. Requesting Autographs Through The Mail. By writing letters to celebrities and requesting an autograph you can build an affordable autograph collection. However there are some guidelines to keep in mind when requesting autographs through the mail, and they are as follows:

A. First and foremost you need a good source for celebrity addresses, which by the way you happen to have in this handy little e-book that you are now reading. This e-book contains over 700 celebrity addresses. And for this edition of this e-book we have focused mainly on entertainment celebrities & American political office holders. If the category that you plan on collecting is outside of the entertainment and political areas then you will need to consult your local library for the appropriate directories. For example if you were to collect famous scientists then you could check for a Who's Who in Science. In fact your local reference librarian can point you to a variety of Who's Who type publications for different fields, and most of these publications will provide career background information and most of the time a contact address as well.

A special note for potential collectors of sports autographs. If you are wanting autographs of players from team sports such as Baseball, Football, etc. then you can write to the players care of their currently affiliated team address. Sports team addresses can often be found in the numerous sports card magazines that dominate your local magazine rack. If the player whose autograph you want is retired and in a sports hall of fame then you can write to the player care of their hall of fame. There are also specialized sports address lists that be purchased for anywhere from $10 to $20 in cost. And since there are now so many different sports card sets on the market for all the major team sports and even sports like Auto Racing, and Golf (Golf Cards? who'd figure!) you can find many inexpensive cards that can be sent to a player for them to autograph. Keep in mind however that some of the biggest names in a given sport often receives thousands of letters and cards requesting their autograph every month. So writing to Michael Jordan and sending him a couple of cards to sign can be done, but the likelihood of his responding can be rather low. It would be more likely that you won't get a response at all or you would get the cards back signed by a secretary or an autopen. So don't use any sports cards that have a high collector value when sending those sports cards to be signed.

B. When writing to a celebrity you must enclose a Self-Addressed Stamp Envelope (SASE) large enough to hold the expected response. For example if you are wanting the celebrity to sign a blank index card or some other type of card then I would recommend a 6 x 9 size business envelope. If you are requesting an autographed photo or are sending an 8 x 10 photo to be signed then you will need to use a 9 1/2 x 11 size business envelope.

C. When writing to a celebrity keep the letter short as possible. Get to your point QUICKLY!, about 1 page is a good ideal length. Write or type your letter neatly and make sure that your grammar, punctuation and spelling is correct. And mention some aspect of the celebrity's life or career. To assist in this aspect of your letter writing some career information has been provided with the celebrity addresses in this e-book. You may want to do some additional research in order to make your letter as personal as possible and help increase the odds that it stands out and ensures that you get that requested autograph. A sample letter has been provided that was recently used by this author in requesting a celebrity autograph that was successful.

D. When writing to celebrities in foreign countries you must include at least 2

International Reply Coupons (IRC's) with your letter. Doing so allows the celebrity to purchase postage at their own local post office so that they can mail your autograph request back to you. International Reply Coupons can be purchased at your local post office.

E. The hardest part of collecting autographs through mail requests is simply having to wait. As a general rule you should allow from 4 to 8 weeks for a reply. In some cases I have received a response in about 10 days and in others I have yet to receive a reply even after 6 months. Some celebrities have been known to take as much as a year to respond to a request. So the rule here is BE PATIENT!.

3. Obtaining Autographs Through Dealers. It has been said that there are two constants in this world that no one can escape and the other is taxes. When a celebrity dies the flow of autographs from that individual dies with them. I offer as proof the fact that everyone I know that has died has had major problems trying to write anything. So, as a result, the flow of autographs that has ended will cause two things to happen. The value of a dead celebrities autograph will rise and the only direct source for the autographs and historical documents of the dead will be through professional autograph dealers. Finding a good dealer can be an important aspect of obtaining those hard to find pieces that you continue to look for to add to your collection. I have found that the best way to obtain the names of various autograph dealers is by buying or subscribing to some of the different autograph publications as the major dealers will advertise in these publications. Some of these dealers are listed in this e-book for the convenience of the reader.

Most autograph dealers will provide a catalog listing of their autograph stock for a period of time, mostly 3 to 4 months without your buying anything. I have noticed there can be a wide discrepancy between dealers prices for similar autograph materials. So it's important to contact several dealers and basically price compare their catalogs. Most respectable dealers will be members of a professional association such as either The Manuscript Society or the Universal Autograph Collectors Club. And most dealers will offer return guarantees and should guarantee the authenticity of their materials for life.

Joanna Miles
2062 N. Vine Street
Los Angeles, CA 90068

Dear Mrs. Miles:

I am writing to you to say that I recently saw a rerun of the Star Trek: The Next Generation episode of "Sarek" which I count as one of my favorite Next Generation episodes. And while watching the episode I remembered that I had a couple of copies of a Star Trek card that had a picture of you in the background.

As I collect the autographs of the various actors and guest stars of the Star Trek series and movies I have enclosed the cards that I have and to ask if you could autograph them for me. Unfortunately I have not found any other Star Trek cards that picture you or any other Star Trek still photographs of you that I could ask that you sign for my collection. Which I find too bad because while your character of Perrin only appeared in two episodes of The Next Generation, it's association to the character of Sarek ensures that it will continue to live in the memories of Star Trek fans for as long as Star Trek continues to exist. Perhaps in the future your character can be brought to Deep Space Nine as a "Special Representative" of Vulcan for a political conference on Bajor or something.

Anyways, I have enclosed my cards that I would like you to autograph and an enclosed SASE for your use in replying.

I appreciate your consideration of my letter and I look forward to hearing from you soon.

Sincerely Yours

David M. Nienow

P.S.: Do you happen to ever make appearances to Star Trek conventions? We sometimes have them here in Oregon and I try to attend as many of them as I can.

William Shatner

100 Wilshire Blvd #1800
Santa Monica, CA 90401

Due to an agreement with his publisher he cannot sign copies of his book "Star Trek Memories".

You wont get Mr. Shatner's autograph through the mail unless you join his fan club for $20. Since most dealers seem to charge an average $45 - $75 for an autograph photo this is still a good deal.

Mr. Shatner does still make an occasional appearance at Star Trek conventions. If you happen to be at a convention that he is appearing at you should be able to get his autograph easily then.

Recent reports indicate that Mr. Kelley has developed arthritis in his hands and is no longer able to sign as much as he has in the past. And friends of the author have had their mail requests refused and sent back to sender.

Mr. Kelley does still make rare appearances at Star Trek conventions. And you may be able to get his autograph then. But this author would recommend considering get his autograph through a reliable dealer.

What Is Shareware?

You've probably heard the terms "public domain", "freeware", "shareware", and others like them. Your favorite board probably has many programs described by one or more of these words. There's a lot of confusion about and between these terms, but they actually have specific meanings and implications. Once you understand them you will have a much easier time navigating the maze of programs available to you, and understanding what your obligations are, or aren't, with each type of program.

Let's start with some basic definitions.

"Public domain" has a very specific legal meaning. It means that the creator of a work (in this case, a piece of software) who had legal ownership of that work, has given up ownership and dedicated the work "to the public domain". Once something is in the public domain, anyone can use it in any way they choose, and the author has no control over the use and cannot demand payment for it.

If you find a program which the author has explicitly put into the public domain you are free to use it however you see fit, without paying for the right to use it. But use care -- due to the confusion over the meaning of the words, programs are often described by others as being "public domain" when in fact they are shareware or free, copyrighted software. To be sure a program is public domain you should look for an explicit statement from the author to that effect.

"Copyrighted" is the opposite of public domain. A copyrighted program is one where the author has asserted his or her legal right to control the program's use and distribution by placing the legally required copyright notices in the program and documentation. The law gives copyright owners broad rights to restrict how their work is distributed, and provides for penalties for those who violate these restrictions.

When you find a program which is copyrighted you must use it in accordance with the copyright owner's restrictions on distribution and payment. Usually these are clearly stated in the program documentation.

Maintaining a copyright does not necessarily imply charging a fee, so it is perfectly possible and legal to have copyrighted programs which are distributed free of charge. Such programs are sometimes termed "freeware", though this term was in fact trademarked by the late Andrew Flugelman and the legality of its use by others could be questioned. In any case, the fact that a program is free does not mean that it is in the public domain -- though this is a common confusion.

"Shareware" is copyrighted software which is distributed by authors through bulletin boards, on-line services, disk vendors, and copies passed among friends. It is commercial software which you are allowed to try out before you pay for it.

Shareware authors use a variety of licensing restrictions on their copyrighted works, but most authors who support their software require you to pay a "registration fee" -- the purchase price of the software -- if you continue to use the product after a trial period. Some authors indicate a specific trial period after which you must pay this fee; others leave the time period open and rely on you to judge when you have decided to use the program, and therefore should pay for it. Occasionally a shareware author requires registration but does not require payment -- this is so-called "$0 shareware".

The shareware system and the continued availability of quality shareware products depend on your willingness to register and pay for the shareware you use. The registration fees you pay allow authors to support and continue to develop their products.

As a software user you benefit from this system because you get to try the software and determine whether it meets your needs before you pay for it. Authors also benefit because we are able to get our products into your hands with little or no expense for advertising and promotion. As a result it is not unusual to find shareware products which rival retail software that costs several times the amount of the shareware registration fee.
