

hanks for downloading "Swimsuits For Your Wife" I know you won't be disappointed. Each icon has been painstakingly drawn pixel by pixel (boy, that sounds painful) to provide you, the viewer, with a choice of 31 beautiful ladies to brighten up your desktop. The black eyes on the two ladies above are a mystery to me - when I pasted the picture into DocMaker they appeared, any ideas on how to fix this problem would be appreciated!

The icons in this collection are all made up of two icons that fit perfectly together. The reason for this is because you can then get much more detailed icons, due to their larger size, on your desktop. To get your icons to line up you will need to turn off the "snap to grid" in your views control panel. If you don't want to do that each time you want to move the icons, then simply hold down the command key when dragging them. This will temporarily disable the "snap to grid" function. You can use the top icon and the bottom icon for storing your stuff as per normal folders (I find that the bottom icon is best for me).

I've noticed over the years a sad lack of Australian Shareware on the net and BB's that I inhabit and so, I've endeavoured to find a solution, hence "Swimsuits For Your Wife" along with "Icons For Your Wife" and "Icons For Your Wife II" that I've also released. If you've ever wanted to pay the shareware fee for a program that you've downloaded, then here's a chance to expunge your guilt. I'm charging a small fee of $5 Australian for this superb collection of icons. Make cheques out to D. Cottuli or just slip a five dollar note in an envelope and send to the "The Address Below".

If you've downloaded the icons or received them from a friend I'd really like to hear what you think - I answer mail and some polite people have even had their efforts rewarded! If you don't have e-mail access, then send a postcard to the "The Address Below".

11 of these icons are mine so don't pinch the . . . . .

I'll start again - These icons are the product of many hours hard work and therefore are not to be included individually in other icon packages without this accompanying Readme - remember it's always nice to give credit where credit is due. They can be freely distributed to friends and Bulletin Boards as long as this File is included with them. They may be included on shareware CDs as long as the publishers contact me first - it's not that I'm stingy - I just like to know how far these icons travel..
