

the Power Manager got tired of waiting for a component to answer a communication.

What to do

You will probably have to replace the main circuit board of your computer. Before you do that, be sure that the small 9 volt battery (located just behind the main battery) is still good. If it isn't, replace it and your problem MAY go away.