

Submitting to Nautilus via Internet

You can now reach Nautilus using the Internet. Contact us at nautilus@metatec.com to submit software, articles, pictures, stacks, and more to Nautilus. You cannot reach Customer Service or Technical Support via Internet. For technical questions or help with customer service, contact Nautilus via the Link or using the telephone numbers for these services.

To send mail address it to:
nautilus@metatec.com.

To send files:
Do a standard FTP transfer to:
nautilus@metatec.com
Use Anonymous and your path to log in.

If you don't have an Internet account and want to know how you can get one, contact your local university. Almost all universities have Internet accounts and many allow the public to access their nets. Or, check a with local BBS that has a full Internet gateway.

Another way to find an account is to look in the Yellow Pages under Telecommunications. Companies like PSI offer local access in many cities. MSEN offers accounts for people in the United States via an 800 number; contact them at 313/741-1120.

For more information about Internet access pick up a copy of Internet News, available in many large bookstores. This magazine provides telephone number of bulletin boards with Internet gateways, as well as commercial organizations.

For more information on using Internet, pick up any of the many books on the subject available in your local bookstore. We recommend Zen and the Art of Internet by Brandon Kehoe or The Internet Companion: A Beginner's Guide to Global Networking by Tracy LaQuey with Jeanne C. Ryer.