

Apple Software Update Program

Overview

The Apple Software Update Program offers you timely, convenient access to the latest system, networking, and communications software for your Apple® II and Macintosh® computers. It ensures that you'll always be up to date with the software you need for peak performance.

As a subscriber to the program, you'll receive software updates by mail directly from Apple Computer, allowing you to take immediate advantage of new features and improvements. For one annual fee, you'll receive the current version of your selected software, as well as all updates released in the following 12 months. Related documentation is included.

The Apple Software Update Program is especially useful for network administrators. The most needed system and networking software is now bundled into convenient packages (one for the Apple II family and one for the Macintosh family) that are available through a single subscription.

If you need updates for software that is not included in the bundles--or if the bundles don't meet your needs--you can subscribe to update services for individual products, selecting from an extensive list of Apple software.

Products covered in the Apple Software Update Program include the Macintosh and Apple IIcs® system software and other Apple software, such as HyperCard®, AppleShare®, Aristotle⁵, and MacTerminal®.

The Apple Software Update Program: It's the easy way to get the software you need to make the most of your Apple computers.

Program Details

The Apple Software Update Program allows you to obtain updates for Apple II and/or Macintosh system, networking, and communications software in a timely, convenient manner.

The program is also flexible: You can subscribe to an update package designed for network administrators, to individual updates for specific Apple software products, or to a combination of both. Each update comes with complete documentation that describes new features and gives correct installation procedures.

With your subscription to any of the update program options, you'll receive the latest version of the appropriate software, as well as all updates released during the subsequent 12 months.

Other Apple software will be added to this program in the future.

Licensing Requirements

If you plan to install these updates on multiple workstations or network servers, you must complete a right-to-update (RTU) license from Apple Computer. The only exception is the client portion of networking software, which may be freely copied to any number of workstations.

Products requiring payment of RTU fees are indicated with asterisks in the lists below; the others require an approved RTU, but no fee. RTU licensing options are available to meet the needs of both small and large installations. You will receive an RTU license application with your subscription confirmation notice.

Network Administration Packages

The network administration packages are designed to provide updates for the Apple software most often needed on local area networks.

If you need updates for software not included in one of the packages, you can purchase individual subscriptions for other product updates. See "Stand-alone Subscription Options" below.

Macintosh Network Administration Package

This package provides updates for the following software:

- Macintosh System Software
