What happened to

yoda

©?? FORGET IT!!!

1.2 The Beat® goes on...

If you haven't spent the last few months on Mars, you should know ↔ that the Swiss watchmaker Swatch® has made the 2nd attempt to re-define the unit of time (the 1st attempt was during the French revolution) with the Beat®, a timezone-less unit that defines the length of a day as 1000 Beats®.

So 12 p.m. in Switzerland is @500, but also @500 in Tokyo and @500 in New York etc...

IMPORTANT the TZ
 ENV-variable has to be set to the right value!

1.3 The timezones

The ENV:TZ variable must start with your timezone as offset from GMT in the \ensuremath{\pm}hhmm format.

Valid formats are:
 +0100
 +0200 (CET DST)
 -0500 (CDT)
 -0800 (PST)
 +0530

1.4 Just add water

Just start it from a shell, end it with Control-C, reduce the window size if you want to...

1.5 This is a Mightgosoft® product ;)

As you've seen, the version number is 0.01β (yes, it's 'just' the 2nd compile) ← and its functionality is very limited indeed.

But... it is just meant to be a public beta, testing the conversion routines... If you're a trend-geek and happen to own 'the original' 'cyberwatch', please test the Beat® readings!

Gimme the results!

And... if the routine loses its beta status, it will be integrated into a WB clock, and even become part of my (still Alpha) BetterDCF package...

1.6 What's crawling there....

Bugs....

Well, I didn't find any...

1.7 How 2 reach me...

Snailmail:

I live in a rural village with very lame postal services!

Phone:

+31 UNL-ISTED!

Email:

1.8 What happened to yoda?

The Force of yoda's 28k8 modem has been obsoleted by a LAN connection, giving my A1200/060 the power to connect to the Net too...

But times of transporting a removeble HD from and to Dagobah is not fully over, I'm still not a Jedi knight ;)
