

Thanks to everyone who helped make The Disc! #8 possible!

This eighth issue of The Disc! is, as with its predecessors, the result of a lot of hard work and late hours by the entire CD-ROM Today staff. As you can imagine, putting together a project such as The Disc! every month is no simple task and so reflects the talent and dedication of a number of people.

On board, as usual, were James Piper, assistant disc editor; Amy Pruette, senior art & design director; Hudson Best, associate art director; Carol Ellison, graphic artist; Phill Powell, associate editor; Lisa Howie and Anne Tucker, assistant editors; Irma Swain, production director; and Pamela Lambert, our production coordinator.

Tim Victor, TechnoVision columnist and contributing editor, programmed the Windows user interface on the PC version of The Disc!

A special thanks to Gary Todd and his company, Televisual Productions, for taping and digitizing the video greetings from our publisher and staff members.

Another special thanks goes to Matthew Richards, editor of our sister publication, CD-ROM Today, in the United Kingdom, especially for sending us some choice Mac programs he could not use; and also to all the good folks at our more distant British 'cousins,' PC Format and MacFormat magazines.

Many thanks to the folks at Disctronics--especially David Williamson and Kyle Locklear--for their support, guidance, and performance in disc replication.

As always, a general and generous appreciation to all of the GP Publications staff in Greensboro and our expanded operations in Burlingame, CA.

And we continue to receive an exceptionally positive response from the many software publishers who are helping us to integrate The Disc! with our magazine.

Lance Elko

Gary Meredith

Selby Bateman

Editorial Director

Disc! Editor

Executive Editor

CD-ROM Today CD-ROM Today GP Publications, Inc.